Labor Act Hearings Offered to Avert Inquiry

Compromise Move Of Committee Is 'Unsatisfactory' to Investigation Forces

By Robert C. Albright.

House demands for an investigation of the Labor Relations Board were countered yesterday by a compromise labor committee move to hold public hearings on proposed changes in the law.

No date was set for hearings, and proponents of a thoroughgoing Congressional inquiry called the action "unsatisfactory."

Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, said he would ask the Rules Committee again to report out his resolution for investigation by a special ten-man committee.

"Still in the Picture"

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, a ranking member of the Rules Committee, said, "The Anderson resolution is still definitely in the picture."

Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, sponsor of a series of American Federation of Labor amendments to the act, demanded that the Labor Committee set a definite and early date for hearings.

The Labor Committee voted unanimously to proceed to hear testimony on proposed changes in the law only after pending wage-hour amendments are disposed of. The motion was made by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia. Barden, who said he feared the hearings would be indefinitely delayed, vainly sought to fix a date for commencement, and said he would renew the effort today.

Ramspeck Seeks New Board

Meanwhile, Representative Ramspeck disclosed he was drafting an amendment providing for an entirely new board to administer the act. He will ask that a five-man board be substituted for the present three-man body, with representatives from the Northeast, Northwest, Southeast, Southwest and central regions of the country.

"The main complaint," said Ramspeck, "is with the nature of the board, and not with the act. Only two sections of the country are now represented on the present board, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. It is clear this body should be selected on a regional basis, and if possible, that representation be given the three most interested groups, employes, employers and the public."

Prepare to Force Vote

Club behind the Labor Committee move for Wagner act hearings was the Anderson resolution for a more intensive inquiry. Administration leaders had sought to avoid any House action until the Senate Labor Committee has finished consideration of a wide range of changes in the law.

Over opposition of Chairman Sabbath (Democrat), of Illinois, Rules Committee members were preparing to force a vote on the Anderson measure before the Labor Committee acted. One spokesman predicted the Rules group would act anyway, unless hearings open without delay.

An alternative proposal was to amend the Anderson resolution to direct the Labor Committee to make an investigation, as was done in the Cox resolution directing an Appropriations Committee investigation of WPA.

Wants No Whitewash

"I don't want hearings that might result in a whitewash; I want an investigation by a disinterested committee," said Anderson. "No legislative committee is equipped to uncover the facts."

But Representative Barden said fair hearings, subjecting labor board members and others to examination on policies, would be tantamount to investigation. He said he sought assurance only that hearings open soon enough to get Congressional action this session on amendments to the act.

Meantime, the Senate Labor Committee was in recess until Monday, when Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, will ask fundamental changes in the law. Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, who Tuesday opposed any basic alteration, may be recalled to the committee for questioning.

Price to Crown Blossom Queen

Noble Leaves CAA To Be Hopkins' Aide

To Help in Business Recovery Drive as $1-a-Year Executive

The White House announced yesterday that Chairman Edward J. Noble was resigning from the Civil Aeronautics Authority to become second in command at the Commerce Department in the drive for business recovery.

Stephen T. Early, White House press relations secretary, said Noble would transfer to the department immediately as a dollar-a-year executive assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins.

Hopkins announced, meanwhile, that he intended to appoint him as Undersecretary of Commerce as soon as Congress enacted legislation creating this position. He said President Roosevelt had approved his request for such legislation.

In accepting Noble's resignation as head of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the President said:

"I am less reluctant to take this action since you are planning to continue in the public service."

Resignation of Noble, who founded Life Savers, Inc., and made the confection famous, caused a shake-up in the commission membership. Commissioner Robert H. Hinckley, of Utah, was elevated to the chairmanship. It was indicated at the White House that the President would appoint Edward P. Warner, of Connecticut, former Republican Assistant Secretary of the Navy, to fill the vacancy on the commission.

Other developments in the business aid program were:

Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, in a letter to Secretary of State Hull, suggested that the proposal to "swap" American cotton for foreign materials essential in war-time be extended to include cotton manufactures, thereby helping "the men and women working for their living in a mill." These workers, he declared, "are among those hardest hit by the reciprocal trade agreements."

The Commerce Department disclosed that Brazil had adopted regulations relaxing restrictions on foreign exchange, thus apparently facilitating payment for goods purchased from the United States. This is in line with the agreement announced following

'3 or 4 More' U. S. Judges Investigated

Thomas Inquiry Also to Continue, Murphy Reveals

Attorney General Murphy announced yesterday that the Federal grand jury in New York would continue its investigation of the financial affairs and activities of Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas, of Connecticut, despite his resignation from the bench.

The Justice Department, it was learned, is investigating complaints against three or four additional Federal judges. One of the judges, it is understood, is in New York City.

Resignation of Judge Thomas, who was recalled some weeks ago from a South American vacation cruise for questioning in the Judge Martin T. Manton and McKesson & Robbins cases, was announced by the White House.

Murphy said the Thomas resignation, which he received Friday, "has made it unnecessary to give further consideration to the question of impeachment."

Manton resigned as senior Federal circuit court judge and subsequently was indicted on charges of accepting loans from companies

U. S. Crushes Ring Selling Stolen Gold To Government

Acting simultaneously in four cities and on opposite sides of the continent, Secret Service agents yesterday culminated a three months' investigation with the arrest of 12 men and the smashing of a syndicate allegedly stealing gold and selling it to the United States Treasury.

At Secret Service headquarters it was revealed that the conspiracy involved $50,000 "and perhaps more."

Ouster Asked For U. S. Clerks Who Fail Test

Committee Indicates Approval of Bill to Blanket in 200,000

Approval by the House Civil Service Committee of a bill for blanketing some 200,000 Federal employes into the classified civil service after noncompetitive examinations was indicated last night following termination of three weeks of hearings.

Chairman Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, said he would offer only one substantial amendment to the bill—stipulating that employes who fail to pass the noncompetitive tests be separated from the service after a six-month period.

Formal Vote Next Week

Ramspeck said the committee will be called together next week for a formal vote on the bill. Once a part of the Administration's omnibus reorganization plan, the measure would give the President permissive authority to cover into the classified service the bulk of Federal personnel now remaining outside the merit system.

The President has indicated he is ready to do this once legal barriers are removed by the bill. Although an estimated 300,000 employes would be potentially affected, groups at both ends of the service ladder, policy-forming posts on the one hand and labor jobs on the other, numbering some 100,000 all told, are not expected to be included in the blanketing.

Superiors Would Certify

Although Republican members have urged competitive examinations, throwing the jobs open to all applications, Federal employe and Civil Service witnesses before the committee are understood to have solidly supported the bill's present provision for noncompetitive tests.

Present occupants of the non-Civil Service posts would first have to be certified by their superiors as eligible for the examinations, would be administered by the Civil Service

Dean Powell, of Cathedral, Elected Bishop of Louisiana

The Rev. Dr. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral and Warden of the College of Preachers, was elected Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Louisiana last night by the diocesan board of laymen and clergy, meeting in Alexandria, La.

DEAN POWELL

Dean Powell was not to be notified of his election until today, his wife declared last night. He has been in bed with influenza for several days. If he accepts the position, he will succeed Bishop James Craik Morris, of New Orleans, who resigned last fall because of ill health.

A son of the South, being a native of Lowndesville, Ala., Dean Powell at 48 years of age, is one of the most energetic leaders in the Episcopal Church. In the eighteen years since his ordination, he has served successively as chaplain of Episcopal students at the University of Virginia, as rector of St. Paul's Memorial Church at the University, as rector of Emmanuel Church in Baltimore, and in February, 1937, accepted his present position at the Cathedral.

In each position he has been noted for his warm interest in youth, for his leadership in the

Cold Wave Sweeps D. C. And Nation

Mercury to Rise During Day Here; Snow, Blizzards Hit Middle West

Washington today will have a taste of the winter weather that heaped snow across the Middle West and gave a dozen cities their coldest April 12 in history yesterday.

The Weather Bureau said the cold wave, sweeping down from Canada, would send the mercury down below freezing in the District early today. A minimum of 32 degrees was forecast, and a heavy frost threatened the flowers that have been a center of attraction for more than 200,000 visitors in Washington. Fair weather and slowly rising temperatures were forecast for today and tomorrow.

Blizzard at Cleveland

From Maine to the Rockies and southward to Missouri and Kentucky, icy winds and snow swept across the country. A blizzard struck Cleveland, and snow shovels were called out in communities in 15 States.

Towns in Wisconsin, Minnesota and South Dakota recorded temperatures down to 8 degrees, the Associated Press reported. Freezing temperatures struck parts of New England, Pennsylvania and New York. Residents of New York City shivered in chilling winds and a freak snowstorm.

21 in Chicago, Cleveland

Record lows for the date were reported in Chicago, where the mercury dropped to 21, 7 degrees below the previous record in 1900; in Louisville, whose 27-degree mark was 5 below the previous record, and in other communities. Cleveland's 21, and Detroit's 22, equaled records. The mercury dropped to 4 degrees above zero in North Dakota, northern Minnesota and Wisconsin. Fruit and wheat crops were damaged in the Middle West.

In many cities householders expressed concern over whether they would be able to get fuel. In most cases, coal men estimated that sufficient reserve supplies were available, despite the stoppage in mining brought about by the deadlock in union contract negotiations in the Appalachian bituminous fields. Pittsburgh coal officials said a continued deadlock would result in a shortage within a few weeks.

Tornadoes in South

Cleveland's blizzard swept off Lake Erie on a 32-mile northwest wind, reaching its worst as workers were going to their jobs. The wind cut through spring clothing, and glazed streets slowed down traffic. Drifts smothered flower beds.

An inch of snow was recorded as the storm died down, only to revive at intervals through the day. The storm left residents of the city shivering, but unsurprised—the city has an average of 1.5 inches of snow in April, and in 1902 snow fell May 10.

Tornadoes roared through areas in Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Four dead and twelve injured were left in their wake.

Democrats Name Jackson for Baltimore Mayor

Baltimore, April 12 (AP).—Howard W. Jackson, veteran Baltimore Democratic leader, was nominated tonight for his fourth term as mayor, defeating Charles H. Buck, "businessman candidate," who had been supported by the State organization headed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor and National Democratic Committeeman Howard Bruce.

Complete returns from the city's 471 precincts gave Jackson 85,882 and Buck 49,691.

The victory amounted to a political comeback for the 62-year-old Jackson. Opposing O'Conor for the gubernatorial nomination last September, he was defeated in every one of the city's election districts and finished 22,000 votes behind.

Jackson's opponent in the November election will be Theodore R. McKeldin, unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Torrio Sentenced To 2½ Years

New York, April 12 (AP).—John Torrio, former Chicago underworld leader, was sentenced today to serve 2½ years in Federal prison for income tax evasion. Judge Clancy first sentenced Torrio to three years, but reduced it by six months at the request of the United States attorney.

Additional sentences of five years and two years were suspended.

Course of Empire

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 12.—Premier Mussolini tonight made the crown of Albania symbolic of that newly conquered country's union with Italy as Greece accepted Il Duce's pledge to respect Greek territorial integrity.

Mussolini called the Italian grand council to act tomorrow on the Albanian National Assembly's offer of exiled King Zog's crown to King Vittorio Emanuele. Acceptance is considered certain. The Italian cabinet is to meet Friday and the Senate and Chamber on Saturday.

Italy Rules Adriatic

Thus the little Balkan kingdom, from which Italian troops chased Zog last week, would be brought within the Italian empire while retaining the outward characteristics of a sovereign state, and Rome would dominate the Adriatic as virtually an Italian sea.

That is the most evident practical effect of the armed occupation of Albania, along with the certainty of Italian monopoly over the development of its oil and other resources.

Foreign capitals have feared that Albania might become the gateway to Italian-German conquests in the Balkans, with Greece in particular danger, but Mussolini, with troops on the Albanian-Greek frontier, promised that Italy would respect Greek teritorial integrity.

The Fascist press indicated that Italian assurances of Greece's safety implied Greek abstention from political transactions with Great Britain, especially any that would give the British fleet use of Greek ports in time of war.

Italy previously had given assurances to Yugoslavia.

Other Italian Moves

In the light of Italian insistence that the Balkans were safe from Fascist expansion intentions, foreign diplomats were puzzled as to the meaning of reinforcing the Fascist army to more than 1,000,000 men by calling up reservists.

A few foreign observers thought Italy might be preparing to press claims on France for advantages in Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal.

Others attached more importance to reports of troop movements to

Communists Active in Navy, House Told

Two Officers Testify Agitators Seek to Undermine Morale

By International News Service.

Two naval officers told an amazed House Judiciary sub-committee yesterday the Navy is "having trouble" with Communist agitators seeking to undermine morale of men in the fleet.

The witnesses were Commander A. M. Bledsoe and Lieut. I. H. Nunn, who appeared in support of provisions in the Smith bill to give the Army and Navy more power to deal with subversive propaganda.

Brandeis Opinion Quoted

Issue was taken by Secretary of Labor Perkins to other features of the bill affecting aliens in this country. And former Supreme Court Justice Brandeis was quoted by Osmond K. Fraenkel, of New York, as holding that restrictive immigration laws are a grave mistake.

"I think I am breaking no confidence when I say that Justice Brandeis is of the opinion that stoppage of immigration into this country is a grave economic mistake," Fraenkel said.

Opposition was registered by Miss Perkins against provisions prohibiting habitual crossing of boundaries between Canada, Mexico and the United States for the purpose of seeking employment. This legislation would invite retaliation, she suggested.

Several Discharged

Commander Bledsoe and Lieut. Nunn disclosed "several men" had been discharged from the Navy for subversive activity. One man was discharged recently because he said he would not fight for this country, Nunn said.

"The last time we appeared on similar (antisubversive) legislation," Nunn said, "we were forced to say that no damage had yet been done. Now we are forced to say that we are having trouble."

Fleet Gathers At Norfolk For Review

Foreign Attaches Will Be Invited To Display of Power

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., April 12.—More than half a million tons of fighting steel rode at anchor in the Hampton Roads-Yorktown area today as the United States Fleet began two weeks of relaxation after completion of war games in the Caribbean.

Foreign naval attaches will be invited, the Navy announced, to view a display of American sea power April 27, when the main body of the fleet will pass in review off the Virginia Capes before Secretary Swanson. It will be the first formal fleet review held in the Atlantic in five years.

Navy officials emphasized that the review had nothing to do with Europe's crisis; that it was decided upon months ago.

However, it was apparent that the Administration was not loath to display the Navy's strength as a factor to be reckoned with in an unsettled world.

Senate and President Pay Final Homage to Lewis

By Scott Hart.

James Hamilton Lewis, of the famous beard, mauve shirts and oratory, was returned in death to the Senate yesterday, to lie briefly in state under the colored skylights that sent slow shadows moving over his silver casket.

The casket, flanked by flaming flowers of such colors as the Illinois Senator blended into character and clothing in his strolls along the avenues here, bore only a spray of lilac, from Mrs. Lewis.

A card on the spray said in her handwriting, "To my precious wonderful husband from his Gypsy." The spray went with the body into a crypt in a marble mausoleum across the road from Arlington Cemetery.

They said on The Hill that it was such a funeral as Lewis would have liked, one with the color of his character, the sweep of officialdom that always attracted him and those tiny wisps of sentiment that he wore like a sprig in his lapel and that crept from the poetical recitations said over the casket by the chaplain of the Senate.

The President took a seat in the crowded chamber a few minutes after seven justices of the Supreme Court entered, and after diplomats

Chamberlain's Policy

By the Associated Press.

London, April 12.—A declaration designed to forestall further German-Italian expansion toward the Dardanelles and still leave the way open for appeasement of Italy was under preparation tonight by Prime Minister Chamberlain for delivery tomorrow to an extraordinary parliamentary session.

Informed sources said Chamberlain had decided to make his declaration stronger because of public opinion against his appeasement policy. It was feared national unity might crack if he failed to take a firm stand.

Chamberlain is expected to give at least a provisional guarantee of Greek and Turkish independence, and was reported authoritatively to be planning a warning that any action threatening either country would be regarded as an "unfriendly act" against Britain.

Both Greece and Turkey were understood to have informed Britain of their willingness to accept the guarantees.

Points of Statement

Some diplomatic circles believed the guarantee to Greece might be more specific than that to Turkey, and that all countries bordering the Mediterranean would be partially covered by a statement that Britain "cannot remain indifferent" to any attempts to change the status quo by force.

[The British statement, as it now stands, the United Press said, also includes these points:

[A strong condemnation of the methods employed by Italy against Albania. It does not, however, denounce the Anglo-Italian accord in which Italy promised to respect the status quo in the Mediterranean.

[Assurance to Parliament that the government is continuing to consult other powers, including Russia and Rumania, regarding extension of the security bloc.

"Softening" Denied

[A member of the British cabinet was quoted by International News Service as saying: "Chamberlain tomorrow will voice a vigorous warning to the totalitarians and the aggressors that Britain and France will jointly take every measure necessary to preserve the status quo in the Mediterranean. Greek and Turkish independence will be guaranteed.—Editor's note.]

GILT OFF THE DOME: Most generals here have offices at the War Dept. resembling those of small town freight agents; grim, but tidier . . . With about $38 worth of second-hand furniture . . . I have been taken to task for speaking lightly of Sen. Cotton Ed Smith. "You ought at least to respect his age!" writes an indignant lady. Does that mean that we will have to take Senators Rush Holt (West Virginia) and Bilbo (Mississippi) more seriously when they're 70 than we do now? Egad!

* * * *

Calm, regal, American-born Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, gets a little out of patience occasionally with some of the more la-de-da members of the British Embassy staff. She thinks that even if they are diplomats and attaches they might attend to business a little more diligently.

"—Yorktown's bad for Britons"

One recent week-end when things were popping and sparks were flying back and forth across the Atlantic and the Embassy air was electric, she observed that several of the young men in striped pants were away. On the following Tuesday she encountered one of them.

"Where were you last week-end?" she asked curiously.

"Oh, I was week-ending at the Chatfield Taylors near Yorktown."

"I seem to remember," said Lady Lindsay, "that we British once lost a war at Yorktown!"

Something Harry Hopkins said to the Iowa Legislature on his memorable visit to Des Moines has been puzzling the politicos around the Capital.

"I have just eight months to do this job," he told the legislators, approximately, referring to his pro-business drive as Secretary of Commerce.

"We pass this way only once, and while we have a job to do we must give it all we've got."

* * * *

This has, to some observers, a fatalistic ring; to others, it seems a sanguine time schedule for the 1939 boom.

The New Dealers think Mr. Hopkins is still their best bet for the Presidency in 1940. They feel he would make an excellent President; that he's a genius as an organizer and executive; that one year from now businessmen will be as enthusiastic about him as WPA workers are now.

"—Harry's ole swimmin' hole"

But to others observers his supporters seem to be working in a hermetically-sealed vacuum of pure optimism. They forget that the ole swimmin' hole at Grinnell has changed since Harry was a basketball player in high school and college there.

House Body Approves D. C. Revenue Bill

Measure Faces Fight In House District Committee, Senate

By James D. Secrest.

The 1939 District revenue bill yesterday cleared its first legislative hurdle when the House sub-committee approved it by 3 to 1, but it faced a fight in the House District Committee Monday and further obstacles in the House and Senate.

With Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, absent, the sub-committee decided to report favorably the compromise bill designed to produce $6,465,000 in new taxes and balance the 1940 District budget.

The two Democratic members of the sub-commitee—Representatives McGehee, Mississippi, and Schwert, New York, voted with Chairman Nichols, although Schwert had stated previously he preferred an income to a sales tax. Representative Bates (Republican), Massachusetts, voted against it.

Major provisions in the revised tax measure are:

A retail sales tax of 1 per cent on all purchases, no matter how small, except food, medicine, newspapers and periodicals and articles exempt from taxation by law.

An income tax which begins at $10,000 on salaries and $500 on unearned income and ranges from 2 to 7 per cent with $2,000 jumps.

A 5 per cent levy on the net income of corporations.

Revised utility taxes.

A tax of 2 per cent on the gross receipts of parking lots.

Application of the personal property tax on motor vehicles to rorate it throughout the year.

Chairman Nichols issued a statement setting forth the estimated return from each tax, other District revenue, and appropriations under the general revenue accounts. The estimates, he explained, are based on a return to the $1.50 real estate tax rate, although the bill permits the commissioners to raise this levy as high as $1.75.

"This allows a cushion and will give the tax system that elasticity which it needs," he said, "and will prevent perennial worry and work of drafting tax legislation for the District."

The estimates also are based on discontinuance of the business privilege tax after June 30 and repeal of the intangible personal property levy.

Nichol's statement, based on House appropriations, which are subject to change by the Senate, said the District needed $40,866,752 to balance its 1940 budget for general revenue expenses, exclusive of those paid out of the highway and water funds.

Present taxes, exclusive of the business privilege and intangible personal levies and with a $1.50 realty tax, will produce $6,371,720, he said.

Estimates on the proposed new taxes are:

Sales tax	$2,500,000
Income	1,500,000
Corporate	2,000,000
Parking lots	25,000
Utilities	400,000
Motor vehicles	40,000

Dirksen is expected to take the lead in a fight to reverse the sub-committee's recommendations when the full District Committee takes up the bill on Monday. Bates and probably several other minority members of the committee, who are outnumbered only by three Democrats ,will join in the fight, it was indicated.

Odyssey of Roosevelt Family, Compiled by First Lady's Brother, to Be Published Saturday

President's In-Law Breakfasts With Sister At the White House

G. Hall Roosevelt, the President's brother-in-law, flew into town and out again yesterday in a way that proved his sister Eleanor isn't the only member of the family who knows how to make every minute count.

Leaving New York at 7, he breakfasted at the White House with Mrs. Roosevelt. "They let me occasionally," he said, smilingly. It is well known that he is of the opposite political faith from the President.

Between breakfast and taking off from Bolling Field for New York just before 3, Roosevelt set on foot some inquiries at the Bureau of Mines. "I am here almost entirely in connection with trying to determine facts which may or may not be in the archives there," he explained.

The explanation was given at a luncheon in his rooms at the Willard that was interrupted by numerous telephone calls and a few personal interviews, all "off the record."

"Odyssey of a Family"

What proved chiefly suitable for publication, before Roosevelt dashed off in a taxi at the last possible moment in order to catch the 2:50 plane back to New York, is a book that will be published Saturday, "Odyssey of a Family." It is devoted to an account of the Roosevelt cousins and their ancestors since 1613. G. Hall Roosevelt's name will appear as author.

"It covers a great deal of territory," Roosevelt commented, "but except for two chapters, I really didn't write it. Each generation expressed itself in its own words, and I have simply arranged the record. And in order to bring it right up to date, my son, who went to Spain last year and saw both sides of that struggle, has written the last chapters.

No Politics in Book

"There are no politics in the book," he commented. "I stopped Uncle Ted (President Theodore Roosevelt) before he held office, and I stopped all anecdotes about the President even before he held office in New York State.

"There is a map in Dutch, that was unearthed after a great deal of research, that shows one of our ancestors visited the Five Nations in New York and was captured. He was ransomed by a Dutch trader at a date which unfortunately happens to be before the Mayflower landed.

"The book also includes an account of a gentleman who played chess with Napoleon."

Roosevelt was just as scrupulous in refusing to answer political questions. While he was city comptroller of Detroit when Attorney General Frank Murphy was mayor, Roosevelt said that he has not held any political office since the President was elected. "I am not in politics, but am just trying to make a living," he said.

U. S. to Probe Auto Rate Freight War

Railroads and Trucks Said to Be Battling For New Car Business

By the Associated Press.

Two Federal transportation regulatory agencies announced yesterday they would investigate a complaint by the National Automobile Transporters Association, Inc., that railroads and trucks had become engaged in a Nation-wide rate war for the business of transporting automobiles from factories to dealers.

The Interstate Commerce Commission will conduct the investigation jointly with the Maritime Commission. Hearings will be held at Chicago June 13.

"The proceeding is Nation-wide in scope," the ICC announcement said. "It embraces all rates, charges, rules, regulations and practices subject to the interstate commerce act, affecting interstate transporting of new automobiles, whether by rail in carloads, or by haul-away, drive-away, or tow-away methods, or by any of those methods in conjunction with water carriers.

"The Maritime Commission has instituted a similar proceeding embracing movements on the Great Lakes and by coastwise and intercostal carriers under the jurisdiction of that body, which proceeding is to be held with this one."

Meanwhile Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, abandoned plans to include a broad remodeling of the Interstate Commerce Commission in general transportation legislation.

A special Presidential committee had suggested creation of a new transportation authority. Instead of adopting this proposal, Lea said, the bill before his committee probably will grant the ICC's request for authority to reorganize itself in order to expedite rate cases and issuance of certificates of convenience and necessity.

"It may be that we will write in definite provisions for the ICC to establish minimum rates and to regulate all competitive rates for all forms of transportation," Lea said.

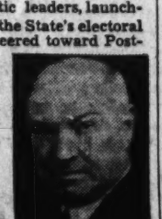
New York Democrats Favor Farley If Roosevelt Does Not Run Again

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. W., April 12.—New York Democratic leaders, launching a drive for the State's electoral votes in 1940, veered toward Postmaster General James A Farley today as their Presidential candidate—if President Roosevelt does not run again.



FARLEY

Among State and county leaders here for last night's $25 a plate Jefferson dinner, typical comment was that from Matthew J. Murphy, Niagara County chairman: "If President Roosevelt is not a candidate in 1940, we are for Mr. Farley."

Other possible candidates mentioned were Vice President John N. Garner and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Farley's only comment: "It is too early to talk 1940."

Well-informed Senators said yesterday that the Administration had agreed to a $150,000,000 slash in its request for an extra $800,000,000 for the slum clearance and low-rental housing program.

These Senators predicted that a Senate Labor Sub-committee would approve a bill for $650,000,000 in additional funds and a $45,000,000 increase in annual Federal aid for these projects.

Howard M. Lesourd, dean of Boston University's graduate school, suggested that "motion picture appreciation" be a required course in all public schools.

Testifying before a Senate subcommittee considering a bill to outlaw block booking of films, he opposed it as unnecessary and said there was no proof that present motion pictures were "seriously harmful."

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, told the Senate:

"There is not a member of this body who does not have the literary qualifications to tell in 15 minutes all the knowledge he has about any subject."

The House Judiciary Committee asked Congress to plug holes in immigration laws which permitted 460 aliens who had been ordered deported last year to remain in this country.

It approved a bill by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, to provide for "detention" of aliens whom the Labor Department ordered to leave the country but who failed to depart because their governments would not grant passports.

Byrnes Opens Works Merger Bill Drive

Calls Committee Meeting Tomorrow To Consider Changes

With the battle over the $100,000,000 emergency relief appropriation out of the way, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, yesterday turned on full steam in his drive for enactment of a bill that would totally revise the structure of the Nation's public works program.

Byrnes called a meeting of his special committee on unemployment and relief for tomorrow morning—the first meeting in some weeks. He said he intended to present to the committee some suggested changes in the bill and hoped to have it reported out "at the earliest possible date." Byrnes added that he had discussed these changes—the nature of which he would not divulge—with the President on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Chairman Taylor, of the House subcommittee investigating WPA, said that officers of the Workers Alliance, headed by David Lasser, president, would be subpenaed to give testimony next week. Herbert Benjamin, general secretary-treasurer of the relief workers' organization, and possibly other officers will appear at executive sessions.

The Byrnes bill, as it now stands, would consolidate in a new Department of Public Works practically all the Federal agencies engaged in work relief, including PWA, WPA, CCC and NYA. It provides formulae for apportioning the projects among the States and for distributing the cost between Federal and State governments.

The bill also liberalizes unemployment compensation and public assistance grants, appropriates funds for aid to "handicapped individuals" and transfers the United States Employment Service from the Labor Department to the Social Security Board.

Intense controversy has been aroused particularly over the evident omission from the bill of provision for white-collar relief workers, over the proposal to transfer the employment service and over the question of whether the new work-relief structure should be placed in a department or an agency. It is expected that some of the alterations to be proposed by Byrnes will affect these points of friction.

Bankhead, 65, Says Father Advised Against Politics

By the Associated Press.

Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, on his sixty-fifth birthday anniversary yesterday, recalled with a smile that his father had discouraged his entrance into politics.

Recounting his 22 years in Congress, he said, with a twinkle in his eyes:

"You know, my father advised his sons not to go into politics. He said a man in Congress can't be a free man—he can't accumulate any competence."

But that didn't stop either William Bankhead or his brother, John. The former was elected to the House in 1917. John was elected a Senator in 1930, and still is serving.

Minority Leader Martin extended the greetings of the House when the members assembled. They arose and applauded. Martin praised the Speaker for his fairness and integrity.

Closing Canal to Lawless Nations Urged to Deter War

Advocates of Strict Neutrality Accuse Roosevelt of Jockeying Nation Into European Fight Before It Comes

By the United Press.

Closing of the Panama Canal to war and peacetime fleets of treaty violators was urged upon Congress yesterday as advocates of strict neutrality accused President Roosevelt of trying to jockey the United States into a European war "even before it comes."

Dr. Charles Fenwick, professor of international law at Bryn Mawr College, told the House Foreign Relations Committee, which is conducting hearings on President Roosevelt's request for less restrictive neutrality legislation, that closing the canal would prove an effective deterrent to lawless nations.

As he spoke, isolationist lawmakers, headed by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, charged that Mr. Roosevelt's recent warnings to totalitarian states may plunge this Nation into Europe's next war.

Challenge to Congress

Both said that the President's indorsement of a Washington Post editorial, discussing his remark that he will return to Warm Springs, Ga., next fall "if we don't have a war," constituted a warning to Mussolini and Hitler that the United States must be regarded in consideration of European affairs.

Nye said the President's attitude is a challenge to Congress to tighten the reins on foreign policy before it is maneuvered into a position where it must declare war.

He said it shows "a possible determination on the part of the President not only to join Europe, but to encourage Europe to undertake war."

Clark insisted that "constant talking about the United States becoming involved is more calculated to get us in than anything that could happen."

Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, declared the President's declaration makes it necessary for Congress to pass rigid, mandatory neutrality legislation.

Dr. Healy Diagrees

The neutrality proposal headed into stormy weather. Dr. Thomas Healy, dean of Georgetown University's school of foreign service, disagreed with Fenwick that legislation should be enacted to throw the economic power of the United States against aggressor nations and treaty violators.

He charged that "another crusade to save democracy will destroy our own," and pointed out that Scandinavian countries managed to stay out of the World War, although they were right at the scene of the conflict.

Lifting of the embargo on arms, he said, would cause a war boom leading to "great pressure for loans and credits to finance arms purchases when foreign cash runs out."

He charged that there is an "orgy of war hysteria and war propaganda" current in the United States. "One of the most terrific campaigns of propaganda in history has been going on here for a year," he said, "and it is so cleverly concealed that it is impossible to spot it as propaganda."

Fenwick accused Healy of being "confused," and discounted criticism that closing of the canal might anger Japan.

Representative Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, former national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, told the committee the present neutrality law is "unneutral" and would have the United States "choose sides."

The neutrality hearing was recessed until 11 a. m. today.

The State Department meanwhile disclosed that Great Britain and France, in the first three months of 1939, obtained licenses for purchase of more than $24,000,000 worth of American war materials. Military airplanes, motors and accessories comprise the bulk of the purchases, totaling $22,000,000. During the same period, licenses were issued for export of only $158,127 worth of arms to Germany and Italy.

House Passes Bill Extending FHA Powers

Carries Amendment Reducing Loans to 'Raw Land' Valuation

The House yesterday passed a bill extending certain powers of the Federal Housing Administration but at the same time carrying an amendment that FHA officials said would mean "scuttling the large-scale housing program."

The amendment, sustained by a 199 to 142 roll-call vote, was said by its sponsor, Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, to be aimed against private promoters "writing up" land values on big housing projects insured by FHA.

The bill indorses the amount of mortgages which the FHA may insure at any one time from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000. This figure represents a compromise, as FHA officials had sought authorization to insure $6,000,000,000 of mortgages.

The House gave FHA victory in its fight with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, over protests of FHLBB officials, the FHA's power to insure mortgages on existing structures was extended for two more years. This function would have expired on July 1.

Defends Amendment

The Cochran proposal requires the administrator, in appraising property to determine the amount of insurance for which it is eligible, to fix his valuation as of the date of applictaion for insurance (plus proposed improvements).

The effect would be that in estimating the value of the land on which the project would be built, the administrator would take into consideration only the "raw land," without regard for its increased value when the project was finished. The law at present limits FHA-insured mortgages to 80 per cent of the value which the administrator estimates the project will have when completed.

One FHA official said yesterday that the Cochran amendment "would make it almost impossible to get responsible sponsors to build these big projects."

Cochran, on the other hand, declared that his proposal would not interfere with construction of large-scale housing where it was needed.

Repair Loans Reduced

Other features of the bill as passed yesterday include a reduction of repair loans which may be insured from $10,000 to $2,500. However, the average loan of this sort—for renovation or repairs to private homes—is only about $400. Lending institutions are required to contribute to the expense of this operation by a new provision authorizing the administrator to make a premium charge of not more than 1 per cent of the original amount of the loan.

The bill, which, except for the Cochran amendment, was sponsored by Chairman Steagall of the Banking and Currency Committee, also extends the present provision of the law permitting insurance of 25-year mortgages on small homes.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday had under consideration a similar bill introduced by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama. The committee, which will meet again today, was in disagreement on the question of permitting the FHA to continue to insure mortgages on existing construction.

Social Agencies Open 3-Day Conference

Welfare Leaders to Discuss Problems Of Modern Community

Social problems of the modern community will be studied by welfare leaders of Washington and nearby counties in a three-day conference arranged by the Washington Council of Social Agencies, opening at 8 p. m. today in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Speaker at tonight's meeting will be David Cushman Coyle, author. His talk will introduce a varied program of round-table conferences, to be held morning and afternoon tomorrow.

Study Family Welfare

Seven discussion groups plan to study family welfare, child welfare, health, recreation, crime, neighborhood organizations, and the effect of the social security act upon local welfare problems. The round-table meetings will be held from 10 a. m. to noon and 2:30 p. m. until 4:30 p. m.

Discussion leaders include Woodson P. Houghton president of the Family Service Association of Washington; Dr. Ralph Beachley, health officer of Arlington County; Helen Fuller, of the Department of Justice; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, member of the board for the Council of Social Agencies; Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Metropolitan Police Women's Bureau; John Corson, of the Social Security Board, and Elsa Castendyke, of the United States Children's Bureau.

Elwood Street to Talk

Allen T. Burns, of the National Community Chests and Councils, will discuss standards of social agencies at 8 p. m. tomorrow, and Elwood Street, retiring District public welfare director, will talk on techniques of financing social welfare at 11 a. m. Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman of volunteer service for the council, will lead a conference on the topic, "Board Members on the Spot; Youth Presents a Challenge."

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the council, will preside at the final luncheon of the conference at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, in the Y. W. C. A. building.

30 to 60-Cent Pay Asked on U.S. Furniture

Wood Industry Recommendations Sent To Miss Perkins

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Department's public contracts board recommended yesterday that the wood furniture manufacturing industry be required to pay wages of 30 to 60 cents an hour in performing Government contracts.

The recommendations were prepared for Secretary of Labor Perkins, who is authorized by the Walsh-Healey public contracts act to determine the prevailing minimum rates employers must pay to conform to Government labor standards.

The board's recommendations were grouped by States as follows:

Thirty-five cents an hour or $14 a week of 40 hours in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Nevada and the District of Columbia.

Forty cents an hour or $16 a week of 40 hours in New York and New Jersey.

Thirty cents an hour or $12 a week of 40 hours in Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Mississippi.

Fifty cents an hour or $20 a week of 40 hours in California and Washington.

Sixty cents an hour or $24 a week of 40 hours in Oregon.

The industry was given 14 days in which to file briefs and make objections to the findings.

New Grand Jury Accuses 21 in 15 Indictments

The new April grand jury accused 21 persons of minor offenses in 15 indictments presented to Justice Letts in District Court yesterday.

The true bills were the first found by the grand jurors, who were sworn in last week.

Those indicted were:

Grand larceny—Robert A. Totten, 42; Howard B. O'Reilley, 54; William E. Dyson, 22, colored.

Joy-riding—Claude W. Jefferson, 22, colored; John W. Cruz, 22, colored; Henry Delli Gatti, 22; Constantine J. Perrus, 22.

Housebreaking and larceny—James Barrett, Edward Murphy, James Bell, 18, colored.

Arson—James Watkins, 40, colored.

Running a lottery and having numbers slips—Lloyd Jackson, 30, colored; Charles Walker, Pauline Hughes, 29, colored.

Assault with dangerous weapon—George Deal, 22, colored; Elizabeth Deal, 25; Kenneth B. Norris, 25; Douglas B. Norris, 22.

The grand jury ignored the following charges:

U. S. Smashes $1,000,000 Dope Ring in Middle West

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 12.—Federal agents smashed a major Midwestern narcotics ring today and opened a new front in the far-reaching war on Kansas City vice.

H. J. Anslinger, United States commissioner of narcotics who came from Washington to supervise the roundup, announced the arrest of 13 persons from New York to Oklahoma and called Kansas City "the capital of narcotics distribution in the Midwest."

One of the 13 was a member of the Kansas City police force. Only last night another Federal official told a legislative committee at Jefferson City the department here made no effort to resist the narcotics traffic.

Six others were arrested here, one at Warsaw, Mo., two in New York City and three in Oklahoma.

Treasury agents have been working on this case 18 months, and Anslinger said their undercover men confiscated or bought about 500,000 grains of narcotics valued in illicit trade at more than $1,000,000.

Today's disclosure sharpened interest in "the police bill" before the Legislature, by which Gov. Stark would put the Kansas City police department under State control.

The bill would give Stark an important victory over his Democratic, intra-party enemy, Thomas J. Pendergast, seasoned boss of the Kansas City organization, indicted by a Federal grand jury last week accused of evading the income tax.

United States Commissioner Charles H. Thompson set bonds ranging up to $30,000 for eight narcotic suspects arraigned before him.

2 Arrested Here In Pinball Drive

Two men and five pinball machines were seized in the Transportation Building yesterday in the first major raid since the devices were outlawed from the District two and a half years ago.

Arrested were Valentino Falcone, 55, of 5300 block Connecticut avenue northwest, a barber, and Joseph Day, 38, colored, of 1400 block Eleventh street northwest. Both were charged with setting up a gaming table in connection with the operation of the pinball machines.

$500,000 Fire Strikes Staten Island Docks

New York, April 12.—A fire of undetermined origin along the Clifton waterfront of Staten Island tonight damaged two municipal ferryboats and burned more than 700 feet of the stringpiece.

The blaze was brought under control after most of Staten Island's fire-fighting units, two fireboats and five companies from Manhattan fought the blaze for more than an hour. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

Lewis' Body Lies in Crypt Near Arlington

Senate Pays Last Respects; Roosevelt Attends Funeral

Lewis

Army and Navy chiefs had filed in with members of both Houses and the high and low of Washington who knew Lewis.

The Senate chamber was deserted when the silver casket was wheeled in at noon. Placed in front of the Speaker's stand, it gradually drew flowers, first a mass of red roses and white lilies from the Cuban Embassy; the White House wreath of white lilies and white carnations; white carnations and jonquils from the Illinois State A. F. of L.; roses and lilies from the Senate; a yellow cross of daffodils from the Thirty-third Division, Illinois National Guard; an American flag in red and white roses inscribed "To Our Senator From Illinois." The flowers spread across the entire rostrum wall of the chamber.

Lewis' desk, the only one with a vacant chair, was covered with red roses, sent by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, who lived at the hotel Lewis used while in Washington and who sat beside him in the Senate. The upholstered chairs were carried out and replaced by stiff-backed ones that fitted more closely together for the crowd.

The service, beginning at 2:30 p. m., was brief. The President had scarcely taken a seat near the family of Senator Lewis, when a soprano sang without accompaniment three verses of "Lead, Kindly Light." The service was recited by the Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, Senate chaplain. The soprano took up again with "Abide With Me," and the service, the first state funeral held in the Capitol since the death of Senator Joseph T. Robinson in July, 1937, ended.

The casket was carried out, with its silver plate: "James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator, May 18, 1863-April 9, 1939."

Crowds Line Walks

Outside, the crowds that knew Jim Ham Lewis—that small, dapper man with the talked-of "pink" beard, the gentility, the flare for a phrase, the one-time stevedore, the courtier in a political world, the teacher, lawyer, soldier, the Senator with the bright shirts and the flamboyant neckties—lined the east walks of the Capitol with bared heads.

They watched the silver coffin as it left in the direction of Virginia, where a Civil War circumstance made Lewis a native. His mother, Julia Hamilton Lewis, was hurrying from the family home in Augusta, Ga., to Richmond, where Maj. John Cable Lewis, her husband, was nearing death from wounds incurred in the Confederate Army.

Arriving in Danville, Va., near the North Carolina line, she gave birth to James Hamilton Lewis. There Mrs. Lewis died. Maj. Lewis remained an invalid. Their son rose to fame.

Only a portion of the crowd followed the coffin from the Capitol across the Potomac into Virginia. The trucks, packed with flaming roses, the yellow jonquils and lilies arrived first at the mausoleum, a stone building on a hill overlooking the river.

Soldiers Fire Salute

The services there were brief. Soldiers fired a salute in token of Lewis the soldier in Cuba and Puerto Rico and a bugler blew taps into a wind, that, rushing across the hilltop, carried the notes away. The casket was placed in the crypt with the spray of lilac and words of Mrs. Lewis.

The President spoke only to an aide at the services in the Capitol. The first to leave, he turned his head toward Mrs. Lewis, who was deeply veiled, and bowed.

The only colored member of Congress, Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday praised Senator Lewis as a scholar and gentleman in whose death "my race has lost a friend tried and true."

State Policeman Hurt at Bowie

Bowie, Md., April 12.—A State policeman assigned to Bowie Race Track suffered a fractured right leg today when his motorcycle collided head-on with an auto at the track gate. Many racing fans leaving the track witnessed the accident.

The injured private is Joseph N. Ford, 26, regularly stationed at Waldorf, who was on special duty. He was carried to University Hospital, Baltimore, by the race track ambulance. Police said no charges would be preferred against the woman driver of the automobile, who was uninjured.

Senate Pays Final Tribute to Courtly Senator Lewis

the visit here of Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha. Under the new decree only 30 per cent of foreign exchange obtained by Brazilians will be set aside for official use. The remaining 70 per cent presumably will be free.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, after a call at the White House, said rubber was the really significant item in the proposed swapping deals. He said 1,000,000 bales of cotton ought to be disposed of readily under the plan.

Warner Is Authority Aide

Warner is technical and economic adviser to the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Hopkins was credited with engineering the shake-up in order to obtain Noble's services. The transfer, however, raises the question whether the authority will be moved over to the Commerce Department in the shifts to be made under the departmental reorganization bill recently passed by Congress.

In addition to his work in promoting co-operation between business and the Government, Noble, a Connecticut Republican, will have immediate charge of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

His transfer, as a result, ties in with the battle which the Administration is waging against the barter system of trade employed by totalitarian powers.

Research Preceded Plan

The department, it was learned, did considerable research work incident to drawing up the plan for "swapping" American cotton and wheat for British, Dutch and Belgian rubber and tin.

A number of other plans, designed both to help domestic business and foreign trade, are understood to be in process of preparation at the department. Noble will have immediate direction of these efforts.

Noble's work will have to do with both large and small business. He will occupy in the Commerce Department, it is expected, much the same role as that which John W. Hanes has assumed as Undersecretary of the Treasury.

To Intensify Activities

The activity of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the interest of foreign trade likely will be intensified, it is expected. The fact that Noble will give special attention to the bureau, it is believed, makes even more remote any prospect that the bureau's foreign service will be transferred to the State Department in the changes to be made under the reorganization bill.

The Administration program for business was outlined, in some degree, in a recent speech by Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce, at a conference between Department officials and representatives of the electrical manufacturing industry. Patterson said the object was to make the department the "business embassy" in Washington.

Creation of the position of undersecretary, Hopkins declared, will be of inestimable value "in this program of stimulating business." To Noble, he said, "public service transcends political partisanship."

No further personnel changes in the department are implied in the transfer, officials said. Patterson and J. Monroe Johnson will continue as assistant secretaries. Noble, however, will outrank them when the position of undersecretary is created for him.

Commission on a non-competitive basis. Those who made a passing grade would then receive a civil service status. Experts before the committee roughly estimated that 10 per cent might be expected to fail.

As the measure now is drawn, those who flunked the examination would still remain in office, but would lack civil service protection. Ramspeck said he thought committee sentiment predominantly favors an amendment terminating the services of those who failed to pass, after a specified period.

Unlike the original provisions of the President's Government reorganization program, which would have placed a single administrator over the entire civil service system, the pending bill leaves the present three-member, bipartisan Civil Service Commission untouched.

This was one of the chief controversial features eliminated from the reorganization bill which recently passed both Houses.

Lathers Return To Work, Sign 2-Year Agreement

Union lathers, on strike since April 3, returned to work yesterday under a new two-year agreement with the Employing Plasterers Association.

Construction at Howard University and Fort Belvoir, as well as private work in the Capital, is behind schedule as a result of the walkout, which climaxed rejection of the union's demands for a $1.75 scale.

Under the new contract, lathers will continue working at the old rate of $1.62½ an hour. However, certain concessions not pertaining to wages or hours were obtained, said Harvey L. Murray, business agent of the union. At present there are about 65 union lathers employed in this region.

which had litigation pending before his court.

Murphy announced the appointment of a committee, headed by Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, to study the problem of fees and delays in the handling of bankrupt estates and receiverships with a view to corrective legislation.

The committee will attempt to decide whether it would be practicable to substitute permanent referees, trustees and receivers compensated by the Government on a salary basis, for the appointive system.

Plans Full Publicity

This study, Murphy intimated, will be pressed in order that action may be had as quickly as possible. He emphasized the need for divorcing these proceedings from politics. Full publicity will be resorted to, he declared. He said, "Some of us think the only thing that will relieve the situation is legislation."

Murphy declared, meanwhile, that there would be no delay in the prosecution of Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City Democratic boss, who was indicted by a Federal grand jury last week on a charge of income-tax evasion growing out of an alleged payment in connection with the Missouri fire insurance rate compromise.

Murphy Pledges Speed

"Only by vigorous, uncompromising prosecution," Murphy declared, "can the public interest be protected." He referred, he said, to the common practice in all important cases of trying to delay the case for a year or two.

"There are a number of pending matters in different parts of the country of great magnitude," he added, "and as they develop one after another you will see them handled without temporization."

Murphy revealed he was making a Nation-wide investigation of the expense accounts of United States marshals and their deputies. In some cases, he declared, deputies have taken members of their families and friends with them as "guards" in escorting a prisoner to another jurisdiction.

The question of expense accounts, he declared, was involved in the resignation two weeks ago of Kenneth Kerr, United States marshal at Cincinnati. He added, however, that "Kerr wanted to resign for a number of reasons."

Murphy said Judge Thomas had been questioned about "other matters" besides the Manton and McKesson & Robbins cases, but he did not say what they were.

Thomas' Doctor Reports

Judge Thomas set up an equity receivership at Hartford, Conn., late last year for the McKesson & Robbins drug firm. The receivership was dissolved later when the concern filed a bankruptcy petition in New York after Philip Musica, former convict who as F. Donald Coster headed the firm, had been unmasked.

Murphy made public a letter from Dr. C. Charles Burlingame, of the Neuro-Psychiatric Institute, of Hartford, where Judge Thomas has been under treatment since March 7.

The letter said the judge's medical advisers had advised him to resign. His nervous and physical condition are such, Burlingame declared, that he would not be able to resume his duties for an indefinite period.

Other Committeemen

Other members of the bankruptcy and receivership committee are Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Circuit Judge Robert P. Patterson of the Second Circuit, Edward H. Foley, acting general counsel of the Treasury Department; Commissioner Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Willard L. Thorp, Commerce Department economist; Justice Thomas McAllister of the Michgan Supreme Court; William J. Campbell, United States attorney for the northern district of Illinois; Dean Lloyd Garrison of the University of Wisconsin Law School; Dean Francis Shea, of the University of Buffalo Law School, and Max Lowenthal, attorney for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in the rail finance investigation.

Holtzoff Sees Early Passage Of Court Bills

Murphy's Assistant Thinks Congress Will Enact Laws Soon

Favorable outlook for enactment of bills now before Congress to provide Federal courts with adequate administrative machinery, and to make them entirely independent of the executive branch, was reported yesterday by Alexander Holtzoff, Special Assistant to the Attorney General. He spoke at a meeting of the Federal Bar Association at the National Press Club.

"I suppose," he told the association, "it is not an exaggeration to say that there probably is no other organization of as large a magnitude, be it a Government department or a business concern, that is lacking in administrative machinery as the Federal judicial system. It was to meet this prime need that legislation was formulated by committees appointed by the Conference of Senior Circuit Judges and by the Attorney General. The bills drafted as the result of the joint labors of these two groups have been approved and their enactment has been recommended by Attorney General Murphy. They are now pending before the Judiciary Committee of each house.

"They also met with the unanimous approbation of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association. Hearings have been held on these measures, and the outlook for their enactment appears favorable."

The bills, Holtzoff explained, would establish an administrative office for the courts, headed by a director appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States.

Window Watcher Again Sues Oil Heir for $300,000 Balm

James Edgar Won $35,000 Verdict In 1936, Appealed

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 12.—James Edgar, of Detroit, resumes tomorrow his court attempt to collect $300,000 heart balm from Lewis E. Mallory 3d, charging the Bradford, Pa., oil heir brazenly stole the love of comely Mrs. Edgar.

Edgar won a $35,000 verdict in 1936 after a sensational trial in which he testified he repeatedly witnessed intimacies between his actress-wife and Mallory from a vantage point outside the defendant's suite in a Miami Beach hotel.

The State Supreme Court granted Mallory's appeal for a new trial, observing "the credulity of the jury must have been severely strained" in accepting testimony these alleged improper relations occurred again and again with the suite's lights on and the shades raised.

Missing for the second trial were the blond Pennsylvanian and the former Mrs. Edgar, who has divorced Edgar and resumed her stage name of Kathryn Crawford.

It was expected Edgar would take the stand again to repeat his account of the window watching, but hotel employes who told of accompanying the husband and seeing the improprieties with him were not available and the prosecution was expected to have their testimony read.

Mallory was at Bedford, Mass., recuperating from an attack of influenza and heart trouble. His attorneys tried in vain to obtain a postponement.

Miss Crawford testified at the former trial as "a friend of the court," denying she had been intimate with Mallory. She accused Edgar of gambling, drunkenness and personal uncleanliness and charged him with beating her.

Plans Complete to Defend U. S. From 'Improbable' Gas Attack

Program for Making and Transporting Masks for All Can Operate Instantly; But Officials Call Question 'Academic'

Uncle Sam has figured out the last detail of protecting civilian America from enemy air raids accompanied by gas bombs. It was stated yesterday in the War Department office devoted to public relations. However, officials considered the question "academic."

"It is a very improbable contingency," it was reported, "that there would ever be a sudden widespread attack on this country with gas. And it is too early to discuss seriously attacks that might be anticipated. But the time factor would be decidedly in our favor, and the department has made all plans to meet such a contingency.

"We have," the spokesman continued, "what is called a 'pilot model' gas mask for civilian use. Together with its exact specifications we have a list of firms capable of turning out these masks in sufficient number, and of transporting them to the territories where they would be needed in ample time to meet any possible contingency.

"All the firms concerned have been notified, and are ready at a moment's notice to carry out the program."

France Drafts Warning to Germany, Italy

Daladier to Declare Position Today; Defense Plans Speeded

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 12.—Premier Daladier drafted a formal statement of the French position in the international crisis tonight amid continuing reinforcement of the French military and naval defense forces.

The premier and defense minister made known that the declaration, to be made tomorrow, would be brief and to the point, serving notice on authoritarian governments what they could expect if they persisted in new annexations or aggression.

Sources close to the government emphasized the "exceptional importance" of the French statement, which significantly was planned to coincide with a declaration Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain is expected to make in the House of Commons regarding guarantees of independence to Greece and Turkey.

British Approval Given

It will bear British approval as a result of interviews between French Foreign Minister Bonnet and Sir Eric Phipps, the British Ambassador. Bonnet also talked with United States Ambassador Bullitt.

Behind the scenes and closely veiled by military censorship, French national defense officials carried on the task of strengthening land, air and sea forces as "precautionary measures" against any possible sudden move by Germany or Italy.

[The French army attained a strength of well over a million men by the arrival at base depots of a steady stream of reservists and specialists answering individual calls to the colors, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

Diplomatic sources heard reports of British and French naval co-operation extending across the Mediterranean and in strategic relation to the Italian islands of Sicily and Sardinia.

Fleet Leaves Base

The French Mediterranean fleet left its base at Toulon last night for a secret destination. It was believed the warships were operating under a joint British-French command. The French fleet was estimated at about 40 warships and the British at 120.

In France, preparations for "all eventualities" were speeded by formal cabinet approval of special defense measures drafted by experts.

President Lebrun signed a series of decrees of which the exact nature was kept secret, but it was known at least a part of their provisions already had been put into effect.

At the French foreign office Bonnet and his assistants were striving to hold their existing allies in a "stop-Hitler" group while seeking new friends among eastern European countries, particularly Yugoslavia.

Conferences seeking to solve the ticklish question of possible Soviet Russian aid for Communist-fearing Poland and Rumania were a high point of the diplomatic endeavors.

Comdr. Ginder to Replace Price As Head of Anacostia Air Base

Veteran Flyer, Now On U. S. Langley, Won Schiff Trophy

SAMUEL P. GINDER

Commander Samuel P. Ginder, veteran Navy flyer, yesterday was assigned to command the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, relieving Commander John D. Price in June.

Commander Price, Navy officials said, will be detailed to command the Fleet Air Base at Coco Solo, Panama Canal Zone. A native of Pennsylvania, Ginder was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1916 and during the World War served with the allied grand fleet in the North Sea. After the war he was assigned to special duty on diplomatic missions in the Adriatic, Mediterranean and Black Seas.

Winner of the Schiff Memorial Trophy in 1930 for commanding a squadron of planes which led the Naval service in safety of operations, Commander Ginder was a member of the Navy racing team at the National Air Races in 1925 and assisted in the development of arresting gear aboard aircraft carriers. He is now executive officer of the U. S. S. Langley.

Britain to Lay Down Terms To Italy Today on 'Status Quo'

British

with blunt words of his own in a parallel declaration tomorrow.

The new slogan "We've got to be prepared" flamed from every other London billboard.

War planes sped over the east coast of Britain in all-night patrol.

Antiaircraft units were well beyond peacetime strength. One hundred and twenty British warships churned the Mediterranean, most of them at or near the Island of Malta. Forty French naval vessels were said to be on active duty in the Mediterranean.

Chamberlain is expected to condemn the Italian invasion of Albania, but to give Mussolini another chance to prove peaceful intentions in the Balkans and the Mediterranean.

This policy was condemned in some quarters as a retreat to the Munich appeasement policy and was said to have been determined upon despite opposition of some members of the cabinet who wanted the Prime Minister to make a clean break with Mussolini.

One distinguished intimate of the Prime Minister said Chamberlain had taree reasons for refusing to do this:

He believes that, if war starts, Mussolini can be won over or persuaded to remain neutral (though Chamberlain is said to admit the price would be high.)

Chamberlain believes the alternatives to appeasement are "war or economic chaos."

Mussolini has given fresh assurances that the Italian troops will be withdrawn soon from Spain and his invasion of Albania will not be extended.

United on Defense

The faction in the cabinet opposed to further efforts to conciliate Italy believes Mussolini realizes his country would be devastated, his people starved by Anglo-French naval blockade, and his armies eventually beaten by superior military strength and economic power of any anti-axis coalition.

This faction argues that the only way to force Mussolini to behave is to denounce the Anglo-Italian expansion coup with armed force.

All parties, however, are united on the new secret precautions Britain now is taking. Anti-aircraft guns are being put up around London. Planes and guns are being produced at a rapid rate.

Despite apparent agreement with Greece and Turkey, British officials were more concerned about getting Rumania and Soviet Russia into the defensive alliance.

Poland, which concluded a tentative defensive agreement with Britain, and Rumania fear that any alliance with Russia would be accepted by Germany as provocative action. British officials argue that Russian co-operation is vital to the success of any anti-aggression coalition.

French, Hungarian and Greek envoys called at the foreign office as did representatives of several of the British dominions. The United States Embassy was advised of the statement Chamberlain will submit to the cabinet for final approval before it is made public tomorrow.

Sources close to the foreign office indicated Chamberlain tomorrow would disclose the nature of assurances from Italy regarding Spain.

It was intimated that through diplomatic channels Chamberlain had been told troops would be taken out of Spain at some specific date following a triumphal entry into Madrid.

Conversations were proceeding with Greek officials in the hope of making any guarantee to that country the basis of a wider Balkan security arrangement.

Under the Balkan pact, Yugoslavia, Rumania, Turkey and Greece are bound to defend each other against aggression from another Balkan country.

It was thought that this pact might be enlarged to include attacks from any source so that if Britain were called upon to support Greece all other Balkan powers would be obliged to follow.

The loophole in the projected Greece-Turkish guarantee was expected to be that Britain will reserve the right to determine when the independence of Greece is threatened.

In the British pledge to Poland the Poles decide that question.

Meanwhile, Foreign Secretary Halifax was reported dissatisfied with slow progress in bringing Rumania into the projected anti-aggression pact. He was said to have suggested a meeting between the Polish and Rumanian foreign ministers, Joseph Bech and Grigore Gafencu.

Much anxiety over the fate of Rumania is expressed as the result of the scheduled visit next week of Gafencu to Berlin. There is fear that once in the German capital, he will be virtually forced to agree to keep Rumania out of the Anglo-French coalition.

The British government is being urged to meet the emergency by bringing Rumania into the coalition forthwith, thus presenting Berlin with a fait accompli.

Rumania has not joined Britain's proposed bloc because Britain intends to bring Soviet Russia into the bloc.

In authoritative quarters it was said there was no question of Britain's willingness to give Rumania a guarantee of military aid if she is attacked, but that Britain does not want to do this at the cost of antagonizing Russia.

Delay in King's Visit Denied

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, April 12.—Despite a semi-official statement today that plans for the forthcoming visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States remain "unchanged," it was learned that the Queen herself recently commented that the present trend of international events made the trip appear uncertain.

It was also pointed out that today's statement about the royal plans constituted merely a "technical denial" that any of the arrangements had been altered without reference to the fact that the wisdom of making the trip is now under discussion.

Bainbridge Colby Calls for Sobriety In U. S. Leadership

New York, April 12 (AP).—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet in 1920, declared tonight that "much has been said that ought not to have been said and for which there is no excuse" in connection with European events. He called for "sobriety in our national counsels and in our national leadership."

"From what we hear today," he said in an address prepared for the fiftieth anniversary dinner of the New York branch of the Sons of the American Revolution, "it seems that we have come a great way from our historical position that our interests are distinct from those of Europe and peculiarly our own. . . .

"What we want is . . . the sobriety which holds leadership steady on the high plane of pure motives and high moral courage. We want the President to consult the people and their representatives in Congress, with open and receptive mind, and to respect their judgment even if it fails to accord with his plans or prepossessions. . . .

"I think it may be said that the country views with deep disapproval every brag that has been uttered, every idle challenge that has been spoken, every word that has been said with the obvious purpose to irritate or affront, no matter whom."

Belgium Calls Up Reserve Specialists

Brussels, April 12 (AP).—The Belgian government today called up military reserve specialists for immediate duty.

Berlin Tells Poland Next Move Is Hers

Nazis Say Demands Are 'Not Exorbitant;' 'Willing to Wait'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 12.—Germany waited today for Poland to make the next move toward settlement of Polish-German issues, but officials suggested that Warsaw make public the German demands which led to the British-Polish mutual assistance accord.

Publication of the demands, they said, would show the world that they were "not exorbitant" and in no way endangered "the independence or territorial integrity of Poland."

Meanwhile Britain, The Netherlands, all small nations likely to be enticed by the British "encirclement of Germany" policy and President Roosevelt were taken to task in today's propaganda wave.

Responsible officials insisted there had been no fresh exchanges between Warsaw and Berlin despite Polish Ambassador Joseph Lipski's visit to the Foreign Office before his return to Warsaw today.

(In Warsaw, however, it was reported Lipski had brought to his government a renewal of the German demands.

(Informants said German leaders had indicated they desired outright annexation of Danzig, a motor road across the Polish Corridor under German sovereignty, and cession of Bogumim, important railway junction, to the Reich.

(These demands previously were made upon Poland and were refused. Their reported reiteration was looked upon by foreign diplomats as signifying German attempts to bargain with Poland for a loosening of the Polish ties with Britain and France.)

Denials also had been made by Germany when the original "suggestions for the settlement" of the Danzig and Polish Corridor questions were made in Warsaw by the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Adolf von Moltke.

The foreign office, it was said, decided to publish the original German demands after Polish Foreign Minister Beck had rejected them and communicated them to London, but then reversed the decision.

A foreign office official asserted the demands had been exaggerated in London and added: "Let Poland publish them and straighten the matter out."

"We have no intention of moving until we see whether Poland intends to sign a mutual assistance agreement with Britain," the official said, referring to the British-Polish pledge to defend each other if the independence of either were threatened pending a formal treaty. (The accord was reached during Beck's recent visit to London, but has not been put in final form.)

"We still don't believe Poland will sign it. We can wait for a solution of the Danzig question . . ."

Berlin, April 12 (U.P.).—Der Angriff, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, scathingly attacked President Roosevelt today and demanded to know: "Is it true, Mr. President, that war mongering and impending war are the last salvation for you and your position?"

This was followed by two other questions: "Is it true that you see no other way out to retain power than to throw armaments profits to opposition industrialists? Is it true that not the international situation but your personal ties and personal affairs move you to the despicable war mongering which you pursue continuously?"

Der Angriff followed with caustic editorial remarks.

"It was obvious that Roosevelt would hasten to the British war mongering encirclement policy with open arms," the paper said, "but we must term it gross irrelevance and impertinence when the head of a state can permit himself to pursue war mongering in this direct form."

church, and for a dynamic quality that has led to expanding congregations and to the establishment and growth of its institutions.

While at the University of Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1917, followed by graduation from the Virginia Theological Seminary at Alexandria in 1920, he had charge of six missions in the Ragged Mountains. He was also a member of the advisory board of the Archdeaconry of the Blue Ridge, the governing body for all missions in the mountain areas of Virginia. Sometimes he held services around open log fires, and on one occasion conducted them in a cornerib. Students at the university were inspired to conduct services at some of the stations. At the time of his rectorship of St. Paul's a permanent church building, parish house and rectory were erected.

It was while rector for six years of the old downtown Emmanuel Church in Baltimore and prominently identified with civic as well as religious affairs in that city, that he was one of the earliest associates of the College of Preachers at the Cathedral here, which he was called to head in 1937.

Guam Defense Up to President, Mansfield Says

Chairman Denies Army Has Asked Harbor Development

Chairman Mansfield of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee said yesterday the question of reviving plans to develop Guam Harbor in the western Pacific as a seaplane base was "entirely up to the Administration."

He denied that recommendation for the controversial plan, disapproved by the House earlier this session, had been made to his committee by Army engineers as Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee had reported Monday. Revealing he had considered providing for Guam in the omnibus rivers and harbors bill, Mansfield said he had written to the chief of Army engineers and had received a factual report on the project but no recommendation.

Guam Not in Measure

"I plan to introduce the 1940 rivers and harbors bill tomorrow after the committee goes over the situation," he said, "Guam will not be in the measure unless the Administration specifically requests it."

A Navy Department proposal to develop Guam as a base for the Pan-American clippers as well as naval patrol planes was stricken out of a naval air base bill two months ago. Later it was reported that the President would ask development of the island as a civil harbor improvement measure.

Meanwhile, the War Department yesterday asked Congress to expand numerous Army posts to permit proper training of mechanized and antiaircraft forces. A two-year program costing $5,000,000 was outlined in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, under which a tract of 750,000 acres in Mojave Desert, Calif., would be acquired for an antiaircraft range and a 40,000-acre plot in south central Iowa be purchased as a training center.

Ten thousand acres would be added to nearby Fort George G. Meade, Md., under the program, which altogether would add 1,000,000 acres to 11 Army reservations.

Both houses of Congress expect to be occupied with defense matters today. The Senate will take up the second deficiency appropriation bill, the main items of which are $110,000,000 for new Army weapons under the emergency defense program and $36,000,000 for naval shipbuilding. A fight is looked for on the floor over an Administration proposal to establish a second aircraft research center at Sunnyvale, Calif. Disapproved by the Appropriations Committee, West Coast Senators will ask the Senate to override the committee action.

Naval Bills on Calendar

The House plans to take up three naval bills under special rules voted Tuesday. The legislation authorizes the modernization of three submarines at a cost of $5,000,000, acquisition of oil tankers from the Maritime Commission, and a $41,000,000 construction program at Navy shore stations.

Senate and House conferees will meet this afternoon on disputed items in the $513,000,000 Army appropriation bill, which contains funds for launching the air expansion program recently voted by Congress.

Italian islands of the Aegean Sea, particularly Rhodes and Leros.

There were no new indication of when Fascist troops would leave Nationalist Spain. (Likewise there was no Italian comment on London reports that Premier Mussolini had promised Britain henceforth to preserve the territorial alignment in the Mediterranean, now that Albania is his.)

Brig. Gen. Gastone Gambara, commander of Italian troops in Spain, conferred with Premier Mussolini today. A communique said they discussed "questions concerning repatriation and the date of repatriation of Italian legionnaires" from Spain. The date was not disclosed.

"Personal Union"

By the Associated Press.

Tirana, April 12.—The Albanian national assembly, meeting in this capital occupied by fascism's armed forces, today offered King Zog's crown to King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy and proposed "personal union" of the two countries.

The assembly, called to establish a new regime while Italian troops occupied points at Albania's Yugoslav and Greek borders, adopted this program:

The former regime of King Zog I has fallen and its constitution is abrogated; a new government is to be named by the assembly; Albania and Italy are to be "associated more intimately;" the crown is offered to King Vittorio Emanuele "for his majesty and for his loyal descendants."

Xhafer Ypi, president of the provisional government, hailed Mussolini as the deliverer of the country from Zog's "yoke" and as a man who had "shown a capacity greater than Caesar or Hannibal."

Italy, it was announced, will "assure the defense" of Albania. This presumably will permit her to keep as many troops here as she pleases.

Italy also undertakes the economic and cultural development of Albania. Albania is to retain her flag.

A new cabinet was set up with Shefket Verlaci as premier and public works minister. Ypi, Zog's inspector of the court becomes minister of justice. Other members are Xhemi Dino, foreign affairs minister; Feizi Alizoi, finance; Andon Bega, economics; Ernest Kolici, public instruction.

Fleet Stops in Norfolk on Way to Review; Sailors to Have Leave, Proceed to New York

fenses in war games in the Caribbean and South Atlantic.

Swanson, representing President Roosevelt, will review about 70 warships passing in a column more than 16 miles long as the Nation's first line of defense moves past Virginia Beach en route to New York for a three weeks visit.

Slower ships of the train will sail a day earlier for New York, where the fleet is due the morning of April 29. The fleet visit here is preliminary to an assembly of the sea forces at New York in connection with the World's Fair.

Other Cabinet members and the Senate and House Naval Committees will be invited to review the fleet with Swanson, who will be accompanied by Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, on the cruiser Boise.

The battleship Pennsylvania, flagship of Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander in chief of the fleet, will lead the column, which will fall into line off Cape Henry and proceed southward about 11 miles at 15 knots to a point off Virginia Beach. After a 19-gun salute for Swanson the column will swing northeastward for New York.

Following the Pennsylvania will be 7 other battleships, 4 aircraft carriers, 11 light cruisers, 5 heavy cruisers, 36 destroyers and auxiliary craft.

The Navy estimated the flagship would pass the reviewing group about 3:05 p. m., and that about 65 minutes would be required for the entire column to pass.

Arrival in Virginia waters today of 26 ships brought ashore thousands of officers and men for shore leave. During the next ten days other units of the fleet will arrive to swell the total number to 104 ships, carrying 46,633 officers and men.

Naval officers described the concentration as an official fleet visit to load supplies and grant liberty and recreation.

Steady streams of relatives and friends poured into the naval operating base to greet the officers and men as they swarmed ashore.

Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commandant of the Norfolk Naval District, called upon Admiral E. C. Kalbfus aboard the battleship California shortly after the ship cast anchor. Kalbfus is senior officer of the fleet under Admiral Bloch.

Ships arriving today included four battleships, five cruisers, four aircraft carriers, 11 destroyers and several lesser craft.

Fleet units already at the Norfolk Navy Yard include five battleships, eleven destroyers and one aircraft carrier.

Gov. Price will head a delegation which will call on Admiral Kalbfus Saturday aboard the California to extend Virginia's welcome to the fleet.

In June, 1927, President Coolidge reviewed a column of 95 ships inside the Virginia Capes.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Maurice Evans Finds 'Road' Is Different

Changes Play Schedules for Local Week; Important Stars for Washington Stages; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THAT EMINENT TRUANT from the halls of scholastic learning, Mr. Elmer Kenyon—now devoting his talents to the better things of the theater—stops unexpectedly by the drama desk to drop the word that it has been found necessary to revise the schedule of performances to be given by Maurice Evans in the National Theater during the week of April 24.

BELL

The full-length version of "Hamlet," it seems, will be presented, under the new arrangement, at all performances during the week, except on Saturday. This will, of course, include the Wednesday matinee. On Saturday, both matinee and night, Mr. Evans will present "Henry IV," Part 1, in which he appears in the role of Falstaff.

Owing to difficulties of staging just encountered in the Boston engagement, it has been found inadvisable to attempt to mount and present on Wednesday and Saturday the elaborate and many-scened settings of both the productions of "Hamlet," in its entirety, and "Henry IV."

In New York these plays were accorded separate playing dates and no experience was had of presenting both on the same day. On "the road" this has been found to offer obstacles that are almost insuperable. Since the performance of the full-length "Hamlet," for example, occupies matinee time from 1 o'clock to 5:15 p. m., it has been discovered that no time remains in which to set up "Henry IV" for the evening.

So, finally, we get to the point. "Hamlet," when Mr. Evans arrives in town, will be offered at the Wednesday matinee at 1 p. m., with the final curtain at 5:15, and nightly, except Saturday, between the hours of 7 and 11:15 p. m. "Henry IV" will be presented at both performances on Saturday, beginning at the usual hours of 2:30 and 8:30 p. m.

So now you know.

Robert E. Sherwood, Maxwell Anderson, Max Gordon and numerous others of the managerial Pooh-Bahs of the first flight to the contrary notwithstanding, perhaps Washington is not such a whale of a tryout town for new plays as we have been deluded into believing in the past. What I mean to say is that Katharine Cornell now is playing in Baltimore in S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," and Mme. Alla Nazimova, to appear next week at the National in "The Mother"—with the opening night's performance for the benefit of the Variety Club's welfare fund—is in Richmond, Va., busily rehearsing for opening night in the capital of the Old Dominion before bringing the last of the Capek plays to Washington. We are being importuned by Frank O'Brien, of Richmond, and Leonard McLaughlin, of Baltimore, to glimpse both of these works while they are in the making. The only impediment seems to be the matter of the clock. It somehow has not enough hours on it.

Marion Talley, noted star of the Metropolitan Opera, radio, motion pictures and the concert stage, will appear in person on the stage of the Earle Theater the week of April 28, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

It was in 1926, if a faulty memory is no more faulty than usual, that Miss Talley came out of the Middle West to achieve a tremendous triumph at the Metropolitan, singing opposite Gigli, the American detractor, now happily in Italy. She has been an outstanding figure in the world of music and the theater ever since. According to radio statistics there are 1,500,000 persons in her regular radio audience. Last year she attracted 40,000 people to the Hollywood Bowl.

It is being bruited about that the Marion Talley to be seen and heard at the Earle is a slim and delightful young person, quite in contrast with the plump farm girl who reached the Metropolitan stage.

Miss Talley's appearance at the Earle will mark the first of those planned for a short tour which will introduce the distinguished diva to a new field of entertainment.

They seem to be doubling up a bit in this glee club festival business at Loew's Capitol Theater. Maybe some of the organizations originally booked have dropped out of the running. At any rate, the glee club from Washington and Lee sang on the bill with Waring's Pennsylvanians last night and will appear again tonight, under the conductorship of Prof. J. G. Varner. Washington and Lee is doing all right for itself in a manner of speaking.

So the summer theaters are beginning to limber up for the heated term. Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran promises the opening of the second season of his Olney Theater May 15, the Roadside is preparing to follow swiftly in his wake and now comes a bulletin from the Crossroads Theater, over at Bailey's Crossroads, in Virginia, to the effect that tryouts will be held for membership in the cast in the company's barn every evening from May 1 to May 5, inclusive, at 8 p. m. The season at the Crossroads will open on June 5, with Ann Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose" as the first offering.

And if you want to be baffled, I suggest that you hunt up Gene Rubinstein, Chicago attorney now in Washington and a former professional magician and mesmerist. We thought we knew all the answers to this sort of hokus-pokus, but when Gene permitted us to shuffle a pack of cards, make our own choices — there were three of us involved in this eerie business—put them back in the deck, shuffle them again and then took an envelope out of his pocket, we gave up. The envelope he took out of his pocket was sealed, so was the next one it contained and so was the third. But the third had in it the three cards we says had picked out of his pack. A nice guy to play poker with—but not against! He ought to be quite a lawyer, too.

Flash! A wire from Carter Barron, eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., which comes just in the nick of time to make the paper. The gist of the taing is that Eleanor Powell, Washington favorite; Kitty Carlisle, screen and stage star; Jessica Dragonette, Larry Clinton and his "listenable orchestra" all have been booked for weeks of personal appearances at Loew's Capitol. What the dates are, I wouldn't know as yet. But here they come. More about it later.

Shooting-at-the-Moon Note

Oh, Mr. Olivier, which plug is going to win that "Wuthering Heights Handicap" today in the fifth at Bowie?

Will Alter Schedule for Capital

MAURICE EVANS,
foremost of the contemporary Shakespearean actors, coming soon to Washington, who finds a slight realignment of play dates necessary as a result of the vagaries of "the road." His full-length "Hamlet" and "Henry IV" both will be presented here, but not precisely as originally announced

"I have been a resident of New York for 32 years," he replied, "and have never seen Coney Island. It is my sincere hope that I will be able to keep the World's Fair in the same category which, I believe, is where it belongs."

ANOTHER BROOKLYN jurist expects to be indicted within one week . . . Frances Farmer and Leif Erickson will get their desired release from Paramount Films today. The new arrangement is that if they ever return to Hollywood, Paramount has first call upon their services . . . Tony Galento insisted that the four shows a day he did at Loew's State for $2,000 a week constituted hard work. To show how easy it is for him to earn that sum, his manager signed Tony to appear in an exhibition bout against a sparring partner for four rounds at the Frisco Fair—for $2,000 . . . The President is worried about Harry Hopkins' health. He's convinced now that Hopkins isn't strong enough physically to go through a Presidential campaign.

FRIENDS of the duPonts are urging that they remove the photo and insignia which adorn the office wall of Dr. W. F. van Oettigen, former professor at Western Reserve and now head of the research division in Wilmington . . . The Fair's first contract was given yesterday—for Meyer Davis to furnish the music at the Terrace Club . . . That box of flowers which was delivered to Joan Crawford when she got off the train in Hollywood was from Franchot Tone. Joan became a flu victim on the train ride back to California . . . Mayor LaGuardia will intervene in the dispute between the Musicians Union and the New Friends of Music . . . The Czech film company which made "Ecstasy" had contracted to make a movie of "Tobacco Road." Hitler's march killed the deal.

A SHIP-NEWS reporter plans to go to Quarantine when Grover Cleveland Bergdoll returns to America and "apprehend" him. The law provides a $50 reward for any citizen who apprehends an army deserter . . . Democratic officials yesterday decided that District Attorney Geoghan, of Kings County, will disappear from the political scene when his term of office expires this year. Geoghan had hoped to run for office, seeking vindication . . . Serge Prokofieff, the Russian composer who did the score for Eisenstein's movie, "Alexander Nevsky," will come to America next February to conduct the New York Philharmonic. The program will include the "Alexander Nevsky Suite" . . . "Please," he cabled his agent here, "don't let them call it 'Alexander Nevsky's Ragtime Band.'"

ISIDORE JUFFE, the fur-bribery witness whose complaint caused the appointment of a special prosecutor in Brooklyn, with its resultant political scandals, still is being detained in a prison cell . . . Juffe is a fourth offender and faces a life term of imprisonment . . . Last week fourth offender Juffe was served with a summons in a civil suit . . . On the summons was stamped the warnings "Defendant is liable to arrest and imprisonment in this case."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 12.—Another really big production being planned is the life and times of John D. Rockefeller. With a biographical cycle in full tilt, this idea seems to be riding the crest of the wave—in epic, not epicac form. In spite of Mr. George Arliss' denial that he'll portray the senior Rockefeller, we believe he'll give.

HOPPER

No star except Mr. Arliss would so fit the role like a glove. Did you know, he's the only star so far who hasn't been called by his first name in columns or fan mags? That all started years back, when his press agent insisted upon having him billed as "Mr. George Arliss." And the habit has held.

Last week while vacationing in Palm Springs, he became the topic of conversation when a group of producers watched him from a distance. Said one: "Yes, sir. That's John D. Rockefeller, all right. Come on, let's ask him if he's got a dime!"

On the "Little Mother" set, Director Garson Kanin said to David Niven, walking down stairs: "Come down a little more American, Davie." Afterwards, said Niven, "How was that? Chicago style, English or flat foot?"

They are calling Mayor Rossi, of San Francisco, Ferdinand the Mayor. Radio Guide does a layout on his flower shop which is perfectly beautiful. Mayors have side lines to fall back on just like movie stars.

We have a life-sized likeness of Ferdie in a Hollywood boulevard flower shop here. He dangles a fresh flower every day—people come miles to see it!

A young boy over in Boyle Heights wrote Alan Mowbray for his autographed picture. Alan sent it back by return mail he received some silver matzos in gratitude.

Saw Paulette Goddard on "Cat and Canary" set reading "Hysteria and Other Forms of Pseudo Neurosis." Paulette won't talk about her home life—her mother taught her always to talk about the other fellow's. But she did confess she was driving her neighbors nuts practicing screams for the picture. My psychic insists that they were married aboard a boat. He was Charlie's psychic at that time!

Archie Mayo is directing "The Restless Age" at Goldwyn's. And was frightfully annoyed with a cricket on the set. "Get that buzzard," he yelled to the prop. boy. "This picture is costing Sam $1,000 a minute."

"Cheap, cheap," chirped the cricket and Archie replied, "Okay, $2,000 then—and not a cent more." Guess he reckoned without Heifetz!

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 12 (AP).—Orson Welles has been paged for "It Can't Happen Here," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is hurrying to get on the screen. I really wasn't very excited when I heard that Mr. Welles had received an offer to play Berzelius Windrip, the dictator, for every company seems to have put in a bid and intimated that the man who made the country Mars-conscious would come here to accept a movie offer.

LOUELLA PARSONS

But today I was told negotiations are actually under way for him to join Lewis Stone in what M-G-M expects to be one of their outstanding pictures of the year. However, until definite announcement is made that Welles is in town ready to face the camera, I refuse to let it affect my blood pressure. A few of the supposed movie nibbles Welles has had are "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Rebecca" and a Warner movie.

Amusing indeed is the role Joe E. Brown plays in "$1,000 a Touchdown" with Martha Raye. He'll be seen as a comic who is so afraid of crowds that when there are more than 12 people together he gets panicky. Consequently his football team can't have any substitutes. Sterling Holloway, the lackadaisical one, will be seen funnily enough as a motorcycle cop. Martha and Joe E., the two mouthiest players in the world, ought to really be a riot teamed together—that's why Para put them in the same opery.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Robert Preston is Para's new white hope since he got such a big hand at the sneak preview of "Union Pacific;" Joan Crawford elated that she now has a chance to sing the songs cut out of "Ice Follies" for Victor records; when Barbara Stanwyck went to Columbia studio for fittings on her "Golden Boy" costumes, Bob Taylor escorted her. That wedding is so soon you'll be surprised; Margaret Lindsay and Ed. Norris, still ablaze, at the La Maze (How's my rhyming); Wesley Ruggles apparently isn't frightened over war rumors for he has booked passage April 20 on the Ile de France; our latest honeymooners, Florence Rice and Robert Wilcox, are back from Hawaii; saw Kay Francis in Westmore's having Perc advise her on make-up for "Memory of Love."

She looked awful pretty; Miriam Hopkins is working with a sprained back, the result of a hectic tennis game.

Olivia De Havilland won't be back on her home lot, Warners, for a long time. As soon as she finishes Melanie in "Gone With The Wind," Sam Goldwyn is grabbing her for the co-starring spot opposite David Niven in "Raffles." Today Sam had lunch with Hal Wallis and Jack Warner. He brought along the half-completed "Raffles" script which John Balderston has whipped up, and the femme part read so well to the Warner bosses they decided to let Olivia do it. Something tells me that by being so obliging about Olivi, Warners may get David Niven again. Niven, you remember, was a hit in their "Dawn Patrol."

Maybe it is only a brain storm, but anyway it's a mighty interesting one. Herb Polesie, who produced "East Side of Heaven," the Bing Crosby picture, has cabled Sascha Guitry an offer to come here to star in "Mountain Monarch," story of King Zog of Albania and his three unmarried sisters. The story is based on a novel written by Charles Bennett, published in 1933. Of course at that time there was no Queen Geraldine, Zog's American-Hungarian bride, but her tragic flight to safety with her newborn infant could easily be added. Guitry, who is a master of make-up and whose movie "Story of a Cheat" made film history, would be very good as King Zog.

Jane Withers was 13 today and her parents gave her a dark room to develop her own candid camera shots; Tyrone Power and Annabella taking a look at Corinne Lachairein in "Prison Without Bars;" Mareleine Carroll and John Hertz, jr., applauding June Kilgour, new singer at Neville Fleeson's Mandalay; Patsy Kelly's romance with Tommy Riley is definitely cooling. The new diamond vanity she carries was a personal gift from Paul Plato; Phyllis Brooks in Palm Springs while Cary Grant has been taking in the San Francisco Fair with Johnny Maschio and Electra Waggoner. That romance, too, seems to be on the wane; Mrs. Wallace Ford stung by a bee now has an ear that's a companion piece to Maxie Rosenbloom's; Venita Varden and Jack Oakie have gone to San Francisco for a big reconciliation; Dolores Del Rio and Cedric Gibbons at Dave Chasen's and Gibbie admitting the beautiful photograph of Dolores in a recent magazine was his work.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Nazimova in Czech Drama Tops New Week

'The Mother' Is Capek's Last Play; Other New Bills

"THE MOTHER," Karel Capek's final drama, will open at the National Theater Monday evening in its brief tour before the New York engagement. Nazimova will play the leading role in this play which Victor Payne-Jennings has speeded into production because of its timeliness. Capek wrote "The Mother" when his native Czecho-Slovakia was threatened with invasion and died last Christmas in Prague just before the debacle that he feared. The author of "R. U. R." was one of the leading dramatists of our day and his last play has been enthusiastically hailed in London and Paris. Nazimova, upon seeing it in Paris, decided that this story of the mother of five sons would be the first new play in which she has appeared in many years. Her most recent Washington appearance was as Mrs. Alving in "Ghosts," before which she had created the role of O'Lan in "The Good Earth." Reginald Bach, Montgomery Clift, Tom Palmer, Stephen Ker Appleby, Alan Brixey, Carl Johnson and Edward Broadley will appear with the star under the direction of Miles Malleson, who collaborated with Pal Selver in dapting the play for the English stage. The opening performance is for the Welfare Fund of the Variety Club. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

RKO-Keith's

"THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP." Deanna Durbin returns to the role of Penny, Charles Winninger's clever daughter, the first of her four remarkably successful parts, in this new comedy. Deanna is the youngest of the three sisters and most of her efforts are devoted to finding a boy friend for sister No. 2 when sister No. 1 has pilfered the former's favorite young man. Miss Durbin has four song numbers and, besides the familiar Mr. Winninger, the cast also includes Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Nella Walker, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan, Ernest Cossart and Felix Bressart.

Capitol

"THE ICE FOLLIES OF 1939." Joan Crawford, James Stewart and Lew Ayers costar in a story of a would-be impressario, whose ambition is to stage an extravaganza of ballet and music on ice. On the way to his ice rink he marries a film queen. The Ice Follie Troupe, headed by Bess Eberhardt and Roy Shipstead, appears in the ice sequences, some of which are in Technicolor. Lewis Stone and Lionel Stander are also in the cast. Dave Apollon brings his revue to the Capitol stage with a 33-piece swing band and such other entertainers as the Oxford Boys, a three-man band; Melissa Mason, eccentric dancer, and Hank Morton, as "Dave's Brother, Ivan." Opens tomorrow.

Earle

"I'M FROM MISSOURI." Bob Burns plays a Missouri mule dealer who invades London's inner circles to convince the government that it should buy mules for army needs. Gladys George, Gene Lockhart, George P. Huntley, Judith Barrett and Patricia Morrison are in the cast of the bazooka man's new comedy. On the stage, Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, Patricia Ellis and Abbott and Costello will be the three headliners of an ambitious vaudeville bill. The noted orchestra leader will present his band in swing melodies, play the piano himself and present Betty Hutton as a feature of his group. Miss Ellis forsakes Hollywood studios for a flyer on the variety stages and Abbott and Costello are comedy favorites from Kate Smith's air show. Opens tomorrow.

Palace

"MIDNIGHT." This gay comedy of an American girl's amusing adventures in Paris will continue with Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche, John Barrymore, Francis Lederer, Mary Astor, Elaine Barrie, Hedda Hopper and Rex O'Malley in the leading roles. Reviewed as "a smart and sophisticated fairy tale," "Midnight" is supported on the Palace screen by Pete Smith's "Heroes at Leisure" and a new "Fashion Forecast."

Metropolitan

"WOMEN IN THE WIND." Kay Francis, William Gargan, Victor Jory, Maxie Rosenbloom, Sheila Bromley, Eve Arden, Rosella Towne and Ila Rhodes are prominent in this story of a transcontinental air derby for women. John Farrow directed the woman flyers and the film is supported by short features and a complete newsreel. Opens tomorrow.

Columbia

"SERGEANT MADDEN." Wallace Beery plays the title role in this film of the New York police, which returns to F street after a week at the Capitol Theater. Alan Curtis plays his son, a rookie cop who runs foul of the law he represents. Tom Brown, Laraine Day, Fay Holden, Marc Lawrence, David Gorcey, Donal Haines and Ben Welden are also in the cast. Opens tomorrow.

Little

"THE LADY VANISHES." Alfred Hitchcock's highly praised suspense film of the mysterious disappearance of a little, old lady aboard a speeding train in Central Europe continues. Dame Ma Whitty, Paul Lukas, Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave have the leading roles. Spies, intrigue and humor are smoothly mixed in this comedy-thriller, now in its third week.

Trans-Lux

"REMBRANDT." A short subject concerning the great painter is the central film at the newsreel theater this week. Also on the screen will be "Fisherman's Paradise," a resort in the Bahamas; "Manila," a visit to the capital of the Philippines and Walt Disney's "The Clock Cleaners." 35 minutes of newsreels from the world over are, as usual, the main feature of the new bill. Opens tomorrow.

War Adventurers Re-united on Set

Twenty years ago Leon G. Turrou, former ace G-man, now technical adviser on "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," was a confidential interpreter in Russia. His superior was Col. Thomas C. Lonergan.

They separated and for more than 18 years Turrou did not see or hear of him.

Recently, the ex-G-man walked on the "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" set and came face to face with Lonergan, who was playing a lawyer in the film.

Turrou has been reunited also with two other associates of his Russian days—Major Harold Buckley, writer, and John Speaks, a producer. The four plan a reunion dinner to talk over their Russian postwar adventures.

A MINIATURE WORLD'S FAIR is what the management offers with the opening of the amusement park this Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The admission, as in the preceding years, is free and there are such establishments as motorboats, the dodge rides, aeroplane swings, the coaster dip, the whip, the pretzel and the merry-go-round. The world cruise will again be in operation and the picnic grounds have already taken reservations from Sunday and church groups. In the ballroom, Herbie Holmes, direct from Chicago's Edgewater Beach Hotel, will play in the ballroom every evening except Sundays from 9 o'clock until midnight. There is ample free accommodation for car parking.

The Civic Theater Presents Euripedes' 'The Trojan Women'

In the most ambitious production of its season, the Civic Theater last night presented Euripides' drama, "The Trojan Women," at the Wardman Park Theater.

The 2,300-year-old drama of the fall of Troy is the first Greek tragedy our town has seen in several generations and, although it was little more than a pedestrian performance, the Civicers should be highly praised, not only for presenting it at all, but for all the care with which they obviously prepared it.

Their difficulty was doubly hard, for they were presenting a completely new form of drama to an audience as unfamiliar with its composition as the cast itself. The long passages of exposition, the use of the chorus of women and even the background of the story are such as to make the layman reach for his Bullfinch. What trouble there was with the performance was that, perhaps, it had been too painstakingly prepared, for it lacked fire and its key was a monotone. Nonetheless, it is an interesting result which the student of literature and the theater would do well to see and one more instance of the effort our local group is making to offer what would ordinarily remain undone.

The Athenian wrote of the unhappy women of Troy after the sack of their city by the Greeks. Wretched Hecuba, now the widow of Priam, is bewailing the fate of her city. Cassandra, their daughter whom Apollo in his love had endowed with the gift of prophecy, but in his anger had decreed that no one should believe, is led away to the captors. Andromache, wife of their dead son Hector, is led away and Menelaus has come to take Helen back to Greece. The Trojan women want Menelaus to kill her, and when she lays her fault to the gods of Olympus, they cry out against her. Astyanax, the child son of Hector and Andromache, must be killed and, as he is taken away to be buried on his father's shield, the fires of the city gleam through the darkness and the women are lead away to the ships. For the women have been the losers in the war which resulted from Paris' lust.

More universal than modern is the theme of the play. Director F. Cowles Strickland has garbed the women in draperies that suggest timelessness, but the soldiers are in the uniforms of today, an effective means of communicating to the audience the force of militarism. The choral speaking is under the direction of Elinor Cox Karsten, who also plays the role of Hecuba. It is remarkably effective at times, yet there are monotonous stretches to be overcome with speedier and more forceful delivery. Harrison Libbey is the military Talthybius and is brisk and telling. Doris McWhirt is the Cassandra and Mimi Norton, a crimson-robed Helen. Young David Ritter was a quiet and puzzled Astyanax.

A special score has been written to accompany the spoken words by Lyman McCrary, who is at the piano, and William M. Girvan's single set is simple and striking, aided immeasurably by the lighting of J. Gordon Dahlem.

An American Mother

Probably no hereditary monarch ever bestowed titles upon his subjects with as lavish a hand as the sovereign American people distribute them among themselves. If it is something of an exaggeration to say that every little boy in America has a chance of being one day addressed as "Mr. President," it is certainly none to say that his chance of being designated in some quasi official accolade as "Mr. Ordinary Citizen" or "Mr. Average Voter" or "Mr. Man-in-the-Street" is very good. Similarly, every little girl has a real opportunity to become known as "Miss Peachpack, N. J." or "Queen of the Tomato Festival" or at any rate as the "typical high school sophomore."

But since the title-giving habit is apparently incurable, it is most gratifying to find one instance wherein such a title is bestowed not for triumphant mediocrity, but for a work of such genuine importance as the raising of a family that contributes a share to the national welfare.

Surely none can say that in naming Mrs. Elias Compton "The American Mother for 1939," the Golden Rule Foundation has not bestowed an honor where one was most richly due. Mrs. Compton has not merely made a success of the difficult career of motherhood, she has made it into something like a work of genius. Each of her four children has won great intellectual distinction and it should be an occasion of some pride to us that one of them is a Washingtonian.

Among them, these children hold 31 college or university degrees and memberships in 39 learned societies. Dr. Karl Taylor Compton is president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. Arthur Holly Compton, of the University of Chicago, is a Nobel prize winner in physics; Wilson Martindale Compton, a widely known lawyer and economist, was a special adviser to the NRA; Mrs. Herbert C. Rice, Mrs. Compton's daughter, is a distinguished Presbyterian missionary to India and wife of the president of a college there.

What part of the Comptons' achievements are the fruit of sheer inheritance—their father was professor of philosophy at Wooster College for Women, where their mother, also, was a teacher—is an old and still unresolved question. But it is certain that this inheritance would have counted for less had the training, encouragement and example given to the Comptons in childhood been other than it was.

A Modest Economy

With the deficiency relief bill reduced to $100,000,000 the WPA will have to cut costs to keep within its appropriation. That the Senate majority is convinced that this can be done without hardship to the unemployed is evident from the testimony given in the course of debate.

Senator Adams, relying upon data furnished by Col. Harrington, the WPA administrator, pointed out that during the past three months 350,000 workers have voluntarily withdrawn from the WPA while discharges for various causes have amounted to 300,000. At this rate, he concluded, there should be no difficulty in cutting the relief rolls more than 600,000 by the end of June, provided no new applicants are taken on. The sums appropriated, he concluded, "are adequate to meet the situation without excluding any man who was intended to be included in the original program of Col. Harrington."

Moreover, economies can undoubtedly be effected through staff reorganizations that would eliminate superfluous administrative workers. There are also other ways in which money could be saved without dropping needy workers from the rolls. For instance, it was discovered that in the course of a single year, the WPA spent $6,000,000 on travel and $1,800,000 on telegrams and telephones. This seems on the lavish side.

During the current fiscal year Congress has appropriated over $2,000,000,000 for the WPA. In face of this stupendous outlay, $50,000,000 seems a very modest economy. Indeed, the cut is hardly more than a gesture, although a significant one. Its importance lies in the notice to WPA officials that the time is at hand when relief outlays will have to be brought within more reasonable limits.

If this modest economy is accepted in the spirit, a basis will be laid for effective co-operation between Congress and the Administration in working out a constructive program to save really substantial sums in the months ahead.

The Barter Proposal

It is claimed that Senator Byrnes' proposal, to exchange a substantial part of the Government-held cotton and wheat for imports of rubber and tin, would serve a dual purpose. The anticipation is that the scheme would enable the United States to curtail burdensome surpluses while as a preparedness measure acquiring reserves of essential raw materials of foreign origin. Therefore the proposal appears promising at first glance. But it would in fact give rise to a multitude of new problems, quite possibly more difficult of solution than that of the loan-secured surpluses.

It is casually assumed that a special intergovernmental barter transaction, involving the disposal of huge quantities of cotton and wheat and the acquisition of comparable supplies of rubber and tin, would not interfere with the normal flow of international trade. Secretary Hull maintains, indeed, that the proposed barter deals would not run counter to the trade-agreements program or "any of our other general policies." He does not explain how we can persuade Great Britain, Holland or other countries to take several million bales of American cotton, in addition to the amounts that would be acquired in any case, unless we are prepared to offer them special price concessions.

Assuming that we need extra supplies of rubber and tin as a defense measure, it is still to be explained why they should not be acquired through regular private trade channels instead of by governmental barter. To say that such transactions would not run counter to our general trade policies is as unconvincing as the assertion, by the Department of State, that the proposal lies "completely outside of the sphere of ordinary commercial interchange." This is akin to saying that because governmental barter is not private trade it follows that such barter will not affect private trade, which reduces the argument to absurdity.

Having come into possession of huge unsalable stocks of cotton, as a result of our policy of raising prices above world levels by means of sustaining loans, the Government is undoubtedly in no position to choose ideal methods of disposal. To find any greatly enlarged foreign outlets for this cotton we shall probably be compelled to agree to terms of exchange amounting to concealed export subsidies. Nothing is gained by glossing this prospect, even without dwelling on the reaction in countries like Brazil, which have cotton of their own to export.

Furthermore, the raw materials received in exchange by our Government would have to be handled with great circumspection to prevent demoralization of prices. For that reason the barter deals would probably carry safeguarding clauses to keep surpluses off the market for varying periods of time in case war did not develop. But rubber is a commodity that is subject to rather rapid deterioration. Wheat, too, cannot be held indefinitely. And, as we have good reason to know, surplus cotton stocks, whether held at home or abroad, are potentially disturbing market factors.

Hence it would be a great mistake to assume that Senator Byrnes has suddenly discovered a panacea for the troubles we have created for ourselves by our price-raising agricultural policies. To the extent that the threat of war leads to emergency buying of cotton, or of other commodities, the problem of disposal is made somewhat easier. But it is not going to be solved by any totalitarian swapping of goods against goods. Indeed, the underlying moral of the projected arrangement lies in its tacit imitation of those Nazi-Fascist systems of controlled trading which Secretary Hull has heretofore so consistently denounced.

Another State Tariff

Secretary Hull may save Ohio a Supreme Court rebuff by his protest against the bill, now before the Legislature in Columbus, which would impose discriminatory taxes on all wines imported into that State from foreign countries. The proposed bill would affect principally our trade with France.

The twenty-first amendment, which repealed prohibition, provided that the transportation or importation into any State of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws of such State, is prohibited. But there is a far cry from the application of this provision to establishment by a State of a tariff barrier calculated to keep out certain products of foreign countries as such.

The passage of this bill would, as Mr. Hull points out, seriously embarrass the Federal Government, which for some years has been engaged in a comprehensive program for the restoration of our foreign commerce through the removal of excessive and discriminatory burdens on the sale of American goods in foreign countries. In line with this action, the United States concluded a reciprocal trade agreement with France under which, in return for substantial concessions by that country, we lowered the duties on wines and champagnes.

The Ohio bill would impose a tax of 50 cents per wine gallon on all imported still wines and $1.50 per gallon on imported sparkling wines and champagne. Domestic wines would bear a levy substantially lower. In other words, the tax power would be used to exercise a right which under the Constitution belongs to the Federal Government alone.

In the Florida cement tax case, the Supreme Court recently held such State levies on foreign products to be wholly unconstitutional. The Florida tax was defined by Justice Frankfurter, on behalf of the majority, as a "calculated discrimination." Speaking of the Florida statute he said that "it would not be easy to imagine a statute more clearly designed than the present to circumvent what the commerce clause forbids."

Yet the Florida statute went no further than the proposed Ohio law would go. The latter would, as Mr. Hull states, not only interfere with American efforts to lower trade barriers but would also "invite retaliation against American exports." The measure is as ill-conceived as it is indefensible. Its passage into law would be a silly waste of effort.

Child Welfare Needs

Washington's backwardness in dealing with the fundamental social problem of child welfare has frequently been noted by students of the subject. It has been emphasized in the findings of no fewer than three independent surveys, made in the District during the past five years.

The need of overhauling and modernizing existing arrangements is thus well attested. But instead of following expert advice on the subject Congress is flirting with such disintegrating schemes as the transfer of the National Training School for Girls to some undisclosed site in Prince Georges County, Maryland. The District budget, as reported out by the House committee on appropriations, provides $20,000 for land purchase and building plans for this strange project. The need, of course, is for co-ordination rather than further decentralization of local child welfare activities.

The importance of co-ordination has been clearly demonstrated in the Lundberg and Bloodgood reports, sponsored by the Children's Bureau, in the report of the Child Welfare League of America and in the findings of the study recently completed by Mr. Jacob Kepecs, former president of the Child Welfare League of America.

It is on the basis of this latter report, made with the assistance of an advisory committee of citizens, that the Board of Public Welfare is now urging the District Commissioners to recommend a supplementary appropriation of $280,000 for the development of a co-ordinating program which would bring Washington in line with other progressive communities in its handling of child welfare problems. The plan emphasizes preventive work and protective service among underprivileged and delinquent children as contrasted with the ultimately more expensive institutional care.

In Northeast Washington a demonstration project has proved distinctly successful in preventive and protective work, indicating the desirability of extending this program in permanent fashion. That is why the Board of Public Welfare favors the establishment of four such units in the District, co-operating closely with the Department of Health and Public Assistance Divisions in their particular areas. Psychiatric and psychological services, now badly lacking, as well as medical assistance, would be provided. The emphasis would be on constructive work in preventing the disintegration of the family.

While the estimated cost of this program seems high, it has a promise which is lacking in the present set-up. That also is expensive, as demonstrated by the proposal for spending $20,000 as a mere starter for a new training school outside the District. Before Congress commits itself to any such folly as this, full consideration should be given to the carefully-prepared alternative program, recommended by numerous experts and now before the Commissioners.

"When you are tempted to say 'hell' say, instead, 'Alas.' It will serve your purpose just as well."—From a sermon. The alas it will!

The Old Indestructibles

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

For many a year the Missouri mule has been famous for possessing a skin as tough as a rhinoceros hide, a kick with the speed and the punch of a triphammer, a disposition like that of a wet hornet, and a heehaw with more volume than a foghorn. Hundreds of them served in the Italian army through the Ethiopian conquest, where they were credited with such "indestructibility" that their hostlers asserted any Missouri mule would "live forever." Such new fame did they acquire that a statue to the Missouri mule was erected in one of the plazas of Rome.

Just a few days ago, eight veteran mules at Camp Dix, all of which had served through the World War, were condemned to be shot at sunrise, as they were too ancient for further duty but also still quite "indestructible." One of them even campaigned in Mexico against Villa. News of their death sentence drew protests. They came from legionnaires, members of humane societies, and other persons whose hearts held a tender place for the army mule. A reprieve has been granted. It should be made permanent.

We'll wager that Mr. Garner, Senator Byrd and the other leaders of the economy bloc would gladly increase the national deficit to provide these faithful veterans with hay and oats to the end of their days.

How To Bridge The Gap

The Post Impressionist

Southern Beauties

THERE WERE no more than eight tables altogether, and only one was vacant. This was one of those Southern restaurants where you may see almost any sort of persons—local tradespeople, truck drivers, impoverished aristocracy on a holiday from the cookstove, or tourists in better clothes than you and I would bother to wear.

We sat down. At the next table sat an older woman, a younger woman and a man who might have been the husband of either. His most noticeable characteristic was a certain solidity. The older woman wore a fuchsia blouse caught with a large jeweled costume pin. The blouse was obviously well tailored and would have fit a more fleshy woman very well. The younger woman wore a high-necked Victorian creation which was obviously well tailored and would have made a slenderer woman look like a princess. These women had big feet.

"There aren't any Southern beauties," said the younger woman. "I haven't seen a single one."

"Oh, that's just a myth," the older woman replied.

"They're all ignorant and they look it," the younger one said.

"Grandpappy wouldn't never have died at 98 hadn't he got the hookworm," I declaimed to my wife.

"We-uns is all got th' hookworm," she replied, scooping her stewed tomatoes with a spoon.

The visitors swung in their chairs to regard us. There was in their faces much academic interest, but, so help me, not one whit of surprise. They stared a moment, then faced each other and nodded with satisfaction.

"The old families are dying out," the costume brooch supplied.

You think I'm making this up, but actually I am omitting the next remark, because you wouldn't believe anyone could have spoken it. The lady didn't whisper it, as she should have.

The man shook his head, embarrassed. "That's a little too strong, isn't it, dear?"

"Of course it's not too strong—I've read it in history books."

"Is you-all coming out to ouah house tonight?" I asked my wife.

"Ah ain't goin' nowheres tonight," she answered, and the conversation lapsed.

I put in a little thought on Southern beauties, and decided that both of the ladies were right, in a way. Of course there are beauties in the southern part of this country. I know, because I have seen them, for instance, in Richmond, Va., where there are languorous brunettes with smoky brown eyes of the kind the songs tell about; stately blonde descendants of the English colonists, of the type the novels tell about; vivacious black-haired small girls who had French great-grandfathers; pretty colleens of Irish extraction, with tilted noses; placid daughters of Scandinavia, and haughty thin ladies of Puritan blood transplanted. I have seen them in Charleston, where there are languorous brunettes, stately blondes, vivacious French girls, pretty colleens, placid Scandinavians, and thin ladies of Puritan blood. I have also seen them in Savannah, Wilmington, Raleigh, Jacksonville, New Orleans and St. Augustine, but I hope my point is made.

I have also seen beauties in Boston, where there are languorous brunettes, stately blondes, vivacious French girls, pretty colleens, placid Scandinavians and thin ladies of Puritan blood, and I would as soon start the search for the Southern type in that region as in Nashville or in Dalton, Ga., or on a tenant farm in Arkansas. So would any movie scout—as has been demonstrated more than once.

This brings us to the matter of the myth. That there is a myth concerning something called a Southern beauty, no one will deny. But how does the myth describe her? She's slow moving. She's fiery, and she'll dance the boards off the floor if the music is right. She's easy-going and will forgive almost anything, but may carve your heart out for the slightest grievance. She hasn't got much backbone. She's sturdy and can hold the family fortunes together when the men-folks fail. She is narrow-minded and ignorant. She is cultured and witty.

In fact, this mythical woman has so many qualities that it is no wonder our paying guests fail to find anybody like her. The illogical part is the obvious feeling of annoyance at the "South" because it cannot or willfully does not produce her. These searchers after beauty should blame, rather, the people who created the myth.

And those people certainly were not Southerners. There would not have been any sense in Cousin Susie's telling Cousin John that Cousin Amy's little Mehitabel was brown-eyed, blue-eyed, blonde, brunette, naughty and nice when Cousin John could see perfectly well for himself whether little Mehitabel was any of these things. If I wanted to be mean I could say that the creators of the myth were ignorant novelists, tin-pan song writers and once-in-a-lifetime tourists. But that would be sectional prejudice.

"But I do like it down here," said the woman who had observed that Southern girls were ignorant, because the food is so good. My dear," she asked the waitress, "where do you get this shad?"

"Out of the Potomac," the girl replied.

The woman's mouth dropped open. "The Potomac? What is that?"

It was the waitress' turn to be astonished. "Oh," she answered, at last, "it's . . . it's out there . . ."

Low-Cost Housing

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the past few years there has been considerable governmental talk and general agitation about stimulating and developing the small and low-cost home construction field. It is generally admitted that 50 to 60 per cent of the American public cannot afford, under present economic conditions, to own and live in a home costing more than $4,000.

The writer's personal experiences with a number of rural small farm developments close to Cleveland have been that the lack of easy, inexpensive and long financing has been the chief retarding factor in this particular real estate branch.

The Federal Housing Administration Title I amendment passed in 1938 has made a feeble attempt to help by relaxing the general rigid restrictions and requirements through the insurance of subsistence rural farm homes not to exceed $2,500. This was evidently intended more or less for the construction of temporary and unfinished homes in the Far West, but is entirely inadequate for this area. No complete home can be built in this section under present high material and labor cost for $2,500. Many have attempted but failed to build a finished four-room house, 26 by 28 feet, equipped with modern sanitary and electrical facilities, for less than $4,000.

It is therefore the view of this writer that if this law containing the same general provisions, but amended, increasing the individual loan amounts from the present $2,500 to $3,500 and the period of time from the present 84 months to at least 120 months, it would act as a great impetus to the general building industry, give employment to thousands of people and housing facilities for the thousands of families who are ill housed.

The support of Representatives and Senators from this district should be enlisted for the modification of this very important housing relief bill (H. R. 5324) introduced by Representative Henry B. Steagall and now awaiting passage.

"Government Career Jobs"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Editorial expression of April 11, pertaining to "Government Career Jobs" and sidelighting the Ellender personnel inquisitorial, exposes anew a perennial subject in modern dress.

While accomplishments of Senator Ellender are represented as "assists" to a goal, they have not, it is inferred, solved the major issue. This much can be said favorably—they have brought in focus unbelievable practices which "speak louder than words."

The weakness in the American civil service system lies in the unwillingness of in-powers to sacrifice personal gain for common welfare. Why not stall the subversive procedure and take time out to progress in essential good? Meetings are held in advocacy of the principle of "career service" and silver-tongued orators speak in praise of the ideal, but all this is futile unless massed sympathy for the cause is co-ordinated into every-day examples of administrative practices.

When selfish purposes are isolated from administrative actions and administrators are alive to Federal welfare and when making office a utility to pay off personal patronage is forgotten—then and not until then will career service in Government be placed on a substantial basis.

From A WPA Worker

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been deeply interested in your recent editorial policy with respect to the WPA. I admire your forthrightness, respect your opinion, and disagree with your philosophy.

You do not straddle the issue; and your opinion is the opinion of thousands, and as such, must be respected. With respect to your philosophy may I say, it is, without doubt, entirely destructive?

My information is first hand. I am a WPA worker. By observation, one-third of those working on WPA are persons who in days gone by would have been taken care of in normal family circles. Another third are persons who are getting along better on WPA than ever before and belong to that army of people who are always in hard luck. Remember, we have always had bread lines in the best of times.

If Congress and business were in a constructive mood plenty could be done to help those who are capable and who have to have a job and cut adrift those who would suffer very little. A simple remedy would be for business and the Government to hire efficient, capable and needy WPA workers when hiring is done.

For example: Though I am a WPA worker. I am actually keeping a person out of a well-paying position. I am assigned to an old-line Government department on a special assignment. I am doing work my superiors call exceptional. I have for about ten months been busy every minute of my time on departmental work. I mean by this, that if I were not assigned to this office, proper channel help would have to be obtained, and that, of course, would be from civil service. The pay of such a worker starts at $1,800 per year; mine is $864.

The Anderson Concert

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some I've met who were not present at the Lincoln Memorial Easter Sunday afternoon seem not to have got from the reports full appreciation of the quality of Marian Anderson as part of that occasion.

Standing in the midst of the crowd, to me the remarkable thing was that any human being could be equal to the immensity of the scene and the significance of the moment, and that here was one who was. She appeared for issues that reach into the hearts of all her countrymen and to the foundations of our Government.

To stand in the entrance of that noble and lovely building, at the foot of Lincoln's statue, on the highest step of that lofty approach, faced with a vast assembly reaching away to the Washington Monument, with the Capital dome beyond shining in the afternoon sun against the far horizon, to stand there and, with folded hands and closed eyes, sing America as though a voice from heaven itself was giving life to all that scene and expressing all the deep emotion of that hushed and tear-dimmed multitude, was indeed a manifestation of genius.

N. C.
Washington, April 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the controversy of the Anderson episode in each editorial, your staff has either purposefully evaded the true issue, or because of lack of insight it is unable to appreciate the significance of what is taking place. The recent editorial, "Happy Ending," would have presented a better picture of the fight against a despicable intolerance by those who acclaim themselves examples of true Americans if it had been entitled, "Happy Beginning."

This lack of insight evidently has made you fail to realize that the philosophy of this great Nation is changing. An important phase of history is probably just beginning.

J. E. ROBERTS, M. D.
Washington, April 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since letters to The Post still come in from those who give digs to the D. A. R. and at the Board of Education, while advertising the great success of the Marian Anderson outdoor concert last Sunday, may I not declare that had the crowds at the aforementioned concert been ten times as great, that would not have changed my opinion as to the position which the D. A. R. organization took or the decision which the Board of Education made.

I further say that it is poor taste, to say the least, in a Cabinet officer or in anyone else, to take advantage of his position as a Government official, and as one introducing Marian Anderson, to cast the reflections he did on those who differ with him as to the advisability of her using the D. A. R. Hall or the Central High School Building under the circumstances.

Nobody from my side of the question could possibly object to Marian Anderson singing at the foot of the Lincoln statue, even if the colored people have now gone bag and baggage to another political party which stands today over against the party of Abraham Lincol. And the attempt of the Secretary of the Interior to bridge that chasm by lugging in Thomas Jefferson, with Lincoln, only served to emphasize the incongruity.

The concert was sensationally advertised; it made its appeal to race pride and it was free on a beautiful Sunday afternoon. The wonder is that there were not three times as many present. But that does not alter the principle involved nor does it change my mind that the entire affair was a colossal mistake.

No Taxation of Churches

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under date of April 3, from Bunker Hill, W. Va., was a letter written by Galen Hiett Swimley, under the caption "Taxation of Churches." It referred to a bill now before Congress known as H. R. 11 and said that "perhaps the lowest is 1 at of the bill now before Congress (H. R. 11) to include the churches among the 'industries' taxable under the social securities act."

From the tenor of this article it looks as if the writer has been misled.

H. R. 11 positively does not tax churches. It does provide for security in old age to all church employes and all other groups, but does not even suggest taxation of churches. That suggestion was in the recommendations of the Advisory Council of the Social Security Board. Those advocating H. R. 11 were the leaders in defeating the suggestion for taxing churches.

Cruelty To Chicks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While passing through one of Washington's shops yesterday, I noticed one counter filled with lovely little baby chickens, so attractive, yet so frightened, so helpless; some of them had been dyed.

Mothers and nursemaids were buying them, and allowing the little children in their care to carry them home; probably in a few hours their legs, wings, and even necks were broken. I think of their suffering. How anyone who has felt a firm, cuddling baby close to the breast can fail to realize the great suffering and fear, the bitter helplessness of these tiny baby chickens, is beyond me.

Books And Things

Bird Lore

DONALD CULROSS PEATTIE loves the men who have watched birds and written about them. What he calls "program notes" for his symphonic anthology of bird writers, "A Gathering of Birds" (Dodd, $3) link W. H. Hudson, watching the great migrations on the Argentine pampas of his youth, with Audubon among the wild pigeons, Gilbert White watching the swallows of Selborne and Frank M. Chapman methodically observing flamingoes in a fashion which is difficult to define but easy to admire. The scattered cuttings fit into place as in a jigsaw puzzle; they make a book.

For there are oddly assorted writers from whom Mr. Peattie quotes. Here is the magnificent Buffon, court biographer to King Louis XV of France, trying to analyze the nightingale's song in a few pages tucked between staunch old Peter Kalm, who walked the American wilderness a century ago, and Robert Cushman Murphy, who reports on the guanays of Peru, "the most valuable bird in the world"—they produce the guano that has fertilized a whole world's farms. Only Mr. Peattie's "symphonic notes" could bind such men together. Mr. Peattie himself writes more fervently of the nightingale than did old Buffon. Oddly enough, he says, he could find no satisfactory account of its song outside the poets who were too unscientific for his purpose. "It," he says, "is the most magical, vivid and varied voice known to me in the world of birds," even when heard without the adventitious aid of artful moonlight. He compares it, for brilliance and versatility, to our mockingbird, for piercing emotion to our white-throated sparrow, for melodic technique to our hermit thrush.

IT IS Mr. Peattie who makes you see Hudson before you read him, "a tall, bent, wounded sort of a man, like a chained and gloomy heron." He shows you John Muir, undersized, but able to sleep in a hollow tree and to roam the Sierras on tea and dry bread, before he introduces Muir's classic picture of the water ouzel. Before you read what Alexander Wilson wrote of the Carolina parakeet, now extinct, or of the great ivory-billed woodpecker, now so nearly gone, or what Audubon wrote of the trumpeter swan and of the million-winged clouds of wild pigeon, he shows you that jealous meeting of the two unknown ornithologists in Louisville in 1810—one scorning the country storekeeper, the other contemptuous of the "peddler" who tramped the wilderness with a parakeet on his shoulder. And Philip Henry Gosse, who wrote of hummingbirds in Jamaica 90-odd years ago, takes on a new interest when you learn that he was the father of Edmund Gosse's crabbed masterpiece, "Father and Son."

SOME OF the most curious pages in this book tell of experiences in taming birds. Dour old Thomas Nuttall, when he was working at the Gray Herbarium, in Cambridge, had his food passed to him through a sliding panel in the door, so that no human would interrupt him; but he learned how an oriole wove its nest by letting the bird try to open his own closed teeth. Gosse tried in vain to domesticate hummingbirds. Audubon kept a tame swan; Gustav Eckstein's laboratory, full of sightly individual canaries, provided material for one of the most original books of recent years. And the late Lord Grey, of Fallodon, seems to have some sixth sense which consoled him as a bird hunter when near blindness came upon him in old age. He could teach wild robins to feed from his hand. A "Franciscan art," Mr. Peattie called it.

Here, too, are some of Cherry Kearton's notes on South African penguins; a bit of William Beebe's jungle peace; Richard Jeffries on flight; notes on birds of paradise, by A. R. Wallace, and bits from Elliott Coues, and, of course, Thoreau, "the noblest stylist who ever devoted himself to nature," if not the closest observer.

MR. PEATTIE says that he included only writers who were both good writers and good scientists. I presume that it is John Burroughs to whom he refers as a "well-loved popularizer of the last generation" who could not pass these tests. Burroughs on the blackbird would please me better than Buffon on the nightingale. I should like, too, to have seen George Miksch Sutton's account of crawling through a hollow log in a turkey buzzard's nest, or the story of his road runners, included, and William Brewster's reports of his own success in persuading owls that he was a speaking mouse . . . All of which proves that Mr. Peattie's is a good anthology; only the best anthologies excite such quarrels.

Mrs. Roosevelt Expected to Attend Interfaith Meeting

Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to attend the interfaith luncheon sponsored by the Washington Round Table of the National Conference on Christian and Jews today at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel, it was announced last night.

Other distinguished guests who were invited to the affair, first of its kind to be held here, are Senators Bilbo and Gillette, and Representatives Burton, Dingell and Sandager.

Speakers will include John Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar; Rabbi Morris Lazaron, Baltimore, and Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, Washington. Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, will preside.

The Washington Round Table is under the direction of Joseph Tumulty, Milton King and Dr. Wilson Compton.

The Strategical Conflict

IT IS EVIDENT that the choice between war and peace rests with Hitler. He is the senior partner in the axis. On the other side, it is evident that Great Britain and France and their allies could not take the offensive even if they wished to do so. They have no force that could strike quickly and successfully at the heart of Germany. It is probably still safe to assume, also, that Hitler has not yet taken the final decision, and that his decision will be determined by the outcome of the diplomatic maneuvers that are now in progress on all the frontiers of Germany, at all the entrances to the Mediterranean, and in the region from Hongkong to Singapore.

On the part of the axis these maneuvers will have been successful if Germany is able to disintegrate an eastern front before it can be consolidated; if Germany and Italy can obtain command of the Mediterranean, severing the British and French communications with Northern Africa and locking up Russia behind the Dardanelles; if Japan, which has already taken Hainan and then Spratly Island, uses them as stepping stones to the seizure of the oil, rubber and tin of the Dutch East Indies and the British possessions of the far Southern Pacific.

If this campaign is completed, British sea power will have been destroyed not only as an offensive but also as a defensive weapon. The axis will not only be able to defy a blockade but it will hold the strategic control over the main portions of the British Empire. The whole of Northern Africa from Morocco to Egypt, the whole Middle East from Turkey to India, will have been cut off from the power of the British navy. Then the situation will have been prepared for vital demands on Great Britain which Britain would be unable to refuse.

IT IS A REASONABLE assumption still that Hitler is seeking to win by the threat of war rather than by war itself. The whole series of actions from the conquest of Czecho-Slovakia in March to the Italian conquest of Albania, and including the Japanese advance through the South China Sea, are consistent with this view.

ON THE PART of the coalition the countering moves are best understood as a campaign to preserve the use of sea power as the chief instrument of diplomacy and the decisive weapon in the event of war. Therefore, the British must at all costs defend the western front, of which the northern end is in Holland and the southern end in Switzerland. They must establish somewhere in eastern Europe a military front, not for the purpose of invading Germany, which is impossible, but to make a blockade effective. They must control the Mediterranean in order to protect their own possessions, in order to be able to get at Italy, the vulnerable partner in the axis, and in order to maintain communications with Turkey and Russia.

If they are able to do these things, they cannot be defeated in a long war. For the blockade would be even more decisive than in 1914-1918, and Italy would be even more vulnerable as Germany's ally than was Austria-Hungary. There is still a good chance that if the coalition acts quickly enough at the strategic points, the condition will never exist in which the axis can challenge successfully the British and French position. We are, therefore, witnessing the effort of the coalition to defeat by diplomacy the effort of the axis to prepare a situation in which it can win without general war a victory such as no European nation has ever won without a war. The object of the preparations of the axis is to checkmate British sea power; the object of the coalition is to fortify British sea power.

THESE DEVELOPMENTS would indicate that since Munich the airplane is no longer regarded either in Germany or in Great Britain as the decisive weapon. In both countries sea power is once more recognized as the weapon that really decides the outcome of a great war. Before Munich the airplane was sufficient to intimidate London and Paris and to immobilize the British navy and the French army. But since Munich the airplane has become a tactical weapon capable of inflicting damage but not of deciding the issue.

There are several reasons for this and they play a determining role in the present situation. In the first place, the British and French, though still inferior to Germany in the air, are now strong enough to be formidable; they have prepared themselves physically to make bombing dangerous and expensive, and they are able to retaliate, particularly against Italy.

Secondly, they are morally prepared to withstand the shock of aerial attack. In September they were not prepared. A nation which cannot be demoralized by air raids cannot be conquered by airplanes.

Thirdly, the coalition has realized, and perhaps the axis too, that a massacre of civilians in London and Paris will arouse the fighting spirit of the whole British Empire, and would almost certainly, as Mr. Hoover has warned them, have a profound effect on the American people.

It is not wholly improbable, that the airplane as a weapon of intimidation against civilians is now a boomerang, and there are competent observers who believe that, weighing all the consequences, it may not be used for such a general massed attack as people believed was imminent in September.

BE THAT as it may, this much at least is clear, that sea power in the widest sense of that term is now the focus of all the calculations in both camps. Sea power, of course, is more than the fleet of warships; it is everything, armies, airplanes, forts, harbors, bases, mine fields, merchant ships and warships which can control the movement of vital supplies.

It is this fact that differentiates the present situation so radically from that of last summer. For underlying all the minor aspects of last summer's crisis, including the British state of mind, the French dissension, the weakness of the air force and what not, there was the great fact that Czecho-Slovakia was beyond the effective reach of sea power, that it could have been conquered before a British blockade had begun to take effect.

In the present situation, on the other hand, every member of the potential coalition, including Poland, Rumania, Turkey, Greece and Russia, can be reached directly or indirectly by sea power operating through Gibraltar, Suez and the Dardanelles. That goes a long way toward explaining the willingness of Great Britain to offer them guaranties. The supplies that sea power controls can reach these countries. It also explains the eagerness of Great Britain to form alliances with them. For each of them enhances the effectiveness of sea power in the event of war and none constitutes a new liability. Insofar as they fight for their own independence they close a hole in the blockade; insofar as they fail to fight, or are defeated, the line of the blockade has still to be established somewhere behind them.

IT IS DISMAL but necessary to think in terms of the strategy of war. For those are the terms in which European statesmen are thinking. There is no other way of understanding what is happening except in terms of strategy.

But that does not mean that war is inevitable. There is at least an even chance, in my own view better than an even chance, that the strategical struggle will be worked out to the end without war, that the outcome of the crisis will be the outcome that generals and statesmen believe would be the outcome if there were a war, that they will count their weapons and not use them. It is a dangerous game, this war game now being played in Europe, but it may still be the alternative to war itself.

"Get upstairs and fix that leaking pipe, quick!"

The Amlie Episode

By Mark Sullivan

Significance Traced

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will shortly write a letter to Mr. Thomas R. Amlie. That will end the Amlie incident. Mr. Roosevelt appointed Mr. Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission last January. A Senate subcommittee held hearings. It became apparent that the Senate would not confirm the appointment. Mr. Amlie wrote to Mr. Roosevelt, asking him to withdraw the appointment. When Mr. Roosevelt replies, there will be public interest in what he says.

The importance of this Amlie episode lies in the light it throws on the widespread movement to take America into a changed form of society. Compared to this movement, the day-to-day developments of party politics are superficial trivialities. This movement is not surpassed in importance even by the war news. For this movement attempts to impose on us internally that which President Roosevelt says we should take up arms to resist externally—namely, collectivist government.

The Senate committee hearings on Mr. Amlie dealt with charges, coming from Mr. Amlie's State, Wisconsin, and elsewhere, having to do with radicalism on Mr. Amlie's part. Throughout the three days of hearings, Mr. Amlie was present; much of the time he was on the stand. From the 400-page record of these hearings is taken what is here said:

THE HEARINGS showed:

That Mr. Amlie wrote "The Forgotten Man's Handbook," in which he proposed a "new social order," which new order would call for "the social ownership, control and operation of the essential means of production."

That Mr. Amlie introduced in Congress a proposed constitutional amendment beginning as follows: "The Congress shall have the power to enact laws providing for the ownership, operation and management, through instrumentalities of government, of business, manufacturing, commerce, industry and mining."

That Mr. Amlie made a speech, later published as a magazine article, entitled "The End of Capitalism," in which he declared that "capitalism cannot be saved."

That Mr. Amlie proposed, for a new political party which he and others hoped to form, a one-plank platform reading: "The absentee ownership of any industrially useful article by a person or persons not habitually employed in the industrial use thereof is hereby disallowed within the United States." ("Absentee ownership" means ownership by anyone other than those "habitually employed" in the business.)

That a newspaper report of a speech made by Mr. Amlie described him as having "asserted that the end of the profit system was at hand."

That Mr. Amlie, in an address in 1935, said, "it is impossible to establish an enlightened capitalism. The only practicable policy for the United States is one aimed at a fundamental revision of the present social and economic order on broad collectivist principles."

That Mr. Amlie's name appeared on a list of sponsors of a call for a meeting of "the friends of the Soviet Union."

ABOUT THE LAST fact, Mr. Amlie explained that he had not fully understood the purpose of the meeting. Mr. Amlie declares he is not a Communist. In saying this Mr. Amlie is genuinely sincere and completely, if technically, accurate. Indeed, Mr. Amlie made an impression of intellectual integrity quite different from the sinuous furtiveness of some Communists. Mr. Amlie is one of those serious-minded radicals to whom dialectical distinctions of creed are important. Some of the most savage argument in present-day America goes on between two varieties of Communists—Trotskyites and Stalinites. (Incidentally the one word by which Mr. Amlie was willing to label himself was "Veblenite.")

Yet if Mr. Amlie is not a Communist, he was forced to admit, when Senator Austin cross-questioned him, that he was what amounts to the same thing. The colloquy ran:

"Senator Austin: Can you say this, with accuracy, that your doctrines lead to collectivism, and that the doctrines of Communism also lead to collectivism?

"Mr. Amlie: I think that is true. The only question would be how complete the collectivism.'

In another colloquy, Mr. Amlie was asked: "In 1935 was it true that you thought the old economic order was breaking down?" Mr. Amlie replied: "Yes, I still think so . . . I feel we probably can go along with democratic institutions here from 5 to 10 years longer than in the remaining democracies of Europe . . ."

REPEATEDLY, Mr. Amlie expressed belief that the existing order of society in America is breaking down. He did not at any point say that he hoped it would break down, nor that he would help to break it down. Yet who can suppose that Mr. Amlie, if made a public official, would try, with much faith or conviction, to uphold the American system, or to bring about business recovery?

Mr. Amlie's views were brought to light because he was a new appointee, and therefore subject to questioning by a Senate committee. Many surmise—and some assert as a proved fact—that there are, already in office, many Amlies, some in key positions, who were appointed during the earlier part of the New Deal, and never subjected to interrogation by a Senate committee. And who can believe that these officials work very zealously to bring about business recovery, and thereby strengthen the existing system? Indeed, would it be fantastic to suggest that some of these, far from working for business recovery, go on the theory that the best way to bring about the new order which they prefer would be to keep the existing system stalled?

Mare Nostrum

Maneuvers In The Mediterranean

MARE NOSTRUM, "Our Sea," that is the name which the old Romans gave to the Mediterranean. And that is what Fascist Italy would make of that great artery along whose shores western civilization was cradled.

The Mediterranean today is Italian. But it is also Spanish and French, Yugoslav and Greek, Egyptian and Turkish. One step removed, it is also Russian and Rumanian and Bulgarian. But, above all, it is British. And it has been dominantly British since the battle of Trafalgar which saw the destruction of French sea power and the beginning of something resembling British hegemony in the whole of that vast area between the Pillars of Hercules and the Suez Peninsula.

THE EVENTS of the last few years and of the last few days raise the question whether Great Britain will very much longer continue to dominate the Mediterranean. But the question will probably be settled, not in the Mediterranean itself, but in Eastern Europe. It may thus be settled not by another Trafalgar, but by what happens along Germany's new borders and beyond them.

In other words, the problem of the Mediterranean, far-reaching though it is, is merely an incidence of that larger problem of power which is occupying the attention of the entire world.

Italy's Gains Since 1911

ITALY is not now and never has been in a position directly to contest with Great Britain for mastery in the Mediterranean.

Since 1911 she has made some progress in that direction. Tripoli and the strategically important Dodecanese islands were annexed after the war with Turkey. The treaty of peace, following the world conflict, gave Italy a better foothold on the Adriatic and the establishment of Italian domination of Albania has strengthened that foothold.

The Spanish civil war enabled Mussolini to transform the Balearics into Italian submarine and seaplane bases and with Gen. Franco as ally, the harbors of continental Spain may also serve the same purpose.

Yet Great Britain continues to hold the whiphand in the Mediterranean. Her naval power is overwhelmingly superior to that of Italy, even leaving the powerful French fleet out of calculations. And Britain's actual or potential allies in the Mediterranean would, in the event of war, permit her to use her sea power with devastating effectiveness. A fact not to be lost sight of, for instance, is that Great Britain has built and is building naval tonnage greater than that of the entire Italian fleet.

BUT IF GREAT BRITAIN'S Mediterranean position would seem to be invulnerable to direct attack by Italy or by Italy and Germany combined, she is by no means invulnerable to indirect attack.

It is this consideration which since the invasion of Ethiopia has been basic in Mussolini's calculations. That is why he has clung to the axis although the axis has so far been infinitely more valuable to Hitler than to him. That is why he clings to it now.

An assault on Egypt or Tunisia or the Suez Canal or Turkey would, at this moment, be fatal to the Fascist kingdom. Acting together, Great Britain and France could blow the Italian fleet out of the water while, at the same time, enforcing so tight a blockade of Italy as to starve her out in a comparatively little while.

The road to power in the Mediterranean, as Mussolini sees it, is overland. The way-stations have been Munich, Prague, Memel, Madrid and Tirana. Each one of these developments was far more a victory for Hitler than for Mussolini, but because they were also defeats for Great Britain and France, the Duce could take comfort in them. Since he has no choice but to bide his time and be content with minor gains, there is satisfaction to be derived in the fact that Hitler's actions may make it ultimately easier for him to challenge the democratic powers.

Still Seek To Woo Il Duce From Axis

TO BE SURE, Fascist Italy would be in mortal danger if Great Britain and France, instead of merely resisting pressure from Rome, began to put pressure on Rome. Italy is the most vulnerable of all the great powers and has been made more so by Mussolini's imperialist ventures.

Fortunately for the Duce, the men in power in London and Paris are unwilling to put the screws on Italy. Recent reports indicate that they still hug the illusion that the axis can be broken by soft-soaping the weaker end. And apparently nothing that has happened during these last months has fully persuaded them to the contrary. Mr. Chamberlain, it is said, will denounce the attack on Albania, but he will not repudiate the Anglo-Italian agreement of April, 1938, even though the basic provision of that agreement is the withdrawal of Italian troops from Spain. Instead of withdrawing any of his troops from that country, Mussolini has been sending more men there. He appears to have no intention of relinquishing a valuable base for an attack on France merely because he had pledged himself to do so.

FROM ONE point of view, it is of no importance whether Mr. Chamberlain denounces the Anglo-Italian pact or not. To all intents and purposes it has become a dead letter. What is important is that it reveals the British premier as still clinging to the tattered shreds of his appeasement policy. And that is important because it will tend to weaken the disposition of East European nations and Soviet Russia to join in an antiaxis combination. And Russia today holds the key to the security combination in Eastern Europe.

In continuing to make a distinction, feeble though it now is, between Hitler and Mussolini, Chamberlain will not break the axis; he may only strengthen it and thus will make his task of organizing Europe against Hitler all the harder. And if he fails in this endeavor there will be a far greater likelihood than there is now of transforming the Mediterranean into Mare Nostrum, an Italian lake.

U. S. Plants, New York Face Coal Shortage Due to Strike

Government officials here and executives in other cities were reported worrying over soft coal supplies last night as the month-old wrangle between operators and union over a new contract for miners dragged through another fruitless day.

Although representatives of the National Coal Association insisted there was enough soft coal stocks on hand to supply the nominal demand for the next 30 days, mayors of New York and Cleveland and Treasury Department officials were said to have warned John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of American, that they feared a coal shortage and possible lack of heat and power.

The Capitol power plant revealed that it had only a five-day supply of coal, and the central heating plant, which furnishes heat for most downtown Federal buildings and the White House, enough for ten days. The White House, however, can pipe heat in an emergency from the adjoining State Department, which has an oil-burner system.

350,000 Miners Idle

The Treasury Procurement Division, which purchases coal used in Federal buildings here, has been getting its supply from the Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Corporation, of Cambria County, Pa. This company, among 2,000 others in the Appalachian eight-State region, has shut down operations since April 1, when the contract ran out.

The shutdown has made 350,000 miners idle, while traffic-lightened railroads have dropped 2,000 employes in the last week.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. declared yesterday that it always kept a huge supply of coal, and Washington Gas Light Co., which uses coke as well as coal, said it had no reason to worry.

At the United States Military Academy, the Associated Press reported, Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, superintendent, ordered a rationing of coal, with use of power-driven machinery temporarily discontinued. International News Service reported an inadequate supply of coal in the Marine Hospitals in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky and Georgia.

New York Supply Low

New York City's supply was estimated as sufficient for from three to seven days, and Lewis disclosed in New York, where he was participating in negotiations with the mine owners, that Mayor LaGuardia has communicated with him regarding a "menacing shortage."

Lewis has threatened to call out bituminous coal miners in other States if the stalemate continues. There was also a possibility he might act likewise in the anthracite industry, which is covered by a contract that expires at the end of this month.

Geographically, the most damaging effects from any shortage were expected in New York and New England and other regions of the highly industrialized East, including Pittsburgh, in the virtual center of the Appalachian fields.

Imaginary Dialogues

(Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley.)

Jack—How're you doing, Jim?

Jim—If I stick to my own figures, I'm doing fine. And you?

Jack—Fine . . . If I use my friends' figures. But, say, Jim, can't we be frank with each other?

Jim—You've been too long in politics to even suggest a thing like that.

Jack—We're good friends, ain't we, and we both want to be President.

Jim—We can't both be President.

Jack—If we could it would settle everything.

Jim—I guess it's only natural for any man to want to be President.

Jim—In your case it's moved away up front.

Jack—Now, Jim, you've got me wrong. I'm not crazy to be President.

Jim—As a matter of fact anybody who wants to be President must be crazy.

Jack—That leaves us as the two outstanding mental cases. But I insist I am not making any fight for it at this stage.

Jim—Jack, you're in a lather from those daily workouts in the Gymnasium of Presidential Aspirants, and you know it.

Jim—Compared to you I'm in a hypnotic state. What's your hurry?

Jack—I'm not in any hurry. My friends are pushing me.

Jim—I don't see why you should want to take on the burdens of the Presidency at your age.

Jack—A man's as old as he looks.

Jim—That's not true in cases of premature baldness. What would the Presidency mean to you? You've got a nice big pecan nut farm down in Uvalde and you wouldn't want to neglect it.

Jack—I can run the nut farm from the White House.

Jim—Well, that's better than if you tried to run the White House from the nut farm.

Jack—Maybe we're both a little hasty.

Jim—Certainly we are. Roosevelt might have an ambition to be President three times.

Jack—Even at that you may be understating it. I wish I knew where Franklin stood. You understand him better than anybody. You must be able to diagnose his intentions.

Jim (sadly)—I used to be able to, but I find it makes me dizzy now.

Jack—You've been with him from the start; you've been close to him in all his moods; you must be able to dope out what he intends to do next.

Jim—Even Franklin doesn't know what he intends to do next.

Jack—Your hat's in the same ring, Jim.

Jim—Maybe.

Jack—If two heads are better than one then two hats must be better than one.

Jack—What's that?

Students Clean-Up, Paint-Up and Rake-Up at Annual Arbor Day at American University

The Leisurely Life
(A Diary)

7 A. M.—Heard the clock strike, but decided to lie 15 minutes longer. Have resolved to quit hurrying. You really get more done by being calm and leisurely—so everybody says.

8 A. M.—Dressed slowly and leisurely, pretending I was a sheltered woman. Have definitely stopped this thing of jumping around like a headless chicken. A woman's first duty is to herself.

8:30 A. M.—Saw a bus coming but did not run. Look very unbecoming running, and there's always another bus. Second bus did not come for 20 minutes. Got quite chilly on windy corner.

9:15 A. M.—Late at work. By exercising great self-control, did not rush in gasping apologies. Boss frigid. Desk piled with work. A big day ahead, Boss informed me.

10:30 A. M.—Worked slowly and serenely. Refused to get excited when Boss said an emergency existed. After all, who will care 100 years from now?

12:30 P. M.—Started to dash out to grab a sandwich. Reconsidered and went to ladies' rest room to primp. Waited 10 minutes for a chance at the mirror. Started to rush down the stairs, but on second thought decided to wait for the elevator. Waited . . . and waited . . .

12:30 P. M.—Started into drugstore for lunch but remembered what doctors all said about leisurely eating. Went to a restaurant. Waitress, the languorous type. Waited . . . and waited for lamb chop and salad.

1:15 P. M.—Had planned to buy stockings, cold cream, dress snappers, hand lotion and look at blouses on the noon hour. Had only time to get the snappers. Strolled back to office. Ten minutes late. Boss nervous. He makes me tired. Everybody else waddles and moseys around—why shouldn't I?

2:30 P. M.—Mr. Proser by my desk with new anecdote. Stopped work, relaxed, sat back and listened leisurely. Have decided to be more gracious in the office.

3:15 P. M.—To ladies' rest room to freshen up. Couldn't get in.

3:30 P. M.—Tried rest room again. Waited for mirror 10 minutes and talked to girls.

3:45 P. M.—Mr. Proser back with another anecdote. Listened graciously.

4:10 P. M.—Work piling up on my desk. Found myself getting flurried, but stopped and relaxed. Cupped my eyes and did my throat exercises for 5 minutes, as the magazine article said.

4:15 P. M.—Boss in, excited. Said everything was behind. Letters only half-finished and should be mailed tonight. Couldn't understand what was wrong with the office today.

4:30 P. M.—Mr. Proser by to tell what Amos and Andy said last night on the radio. Relaxed and listened graciously.

5:30 P. M.—Worked 30 minutes overtime getting out emergency letters. Started to dash to bus to avoid the crowds from the stores, but decided to primp and take my time.

5:45 P. M.—Missed a bus. Got caught with the store crowds. Had to stand all the way home.

7:30 P. M.—Started to mend gloves, put on snapper, etc. Company in. Was relaxed and gracious. They stayed until 11:30.

MIDNIGHT MEDITATION—Nothing done. Behind in everything. My affairs a mess. Utterly exhausted from being relaxed and gracious. Have learned one thing—whenever you see one of those serene, leisurely, charming creatures in an office you can bet your last dollar somebody else is doing her work.

Beau-Catching Washable Cottons

Washington's inevitable heat waves can be tempered with these washable frocks, seen yesterday in an advance summer style showing at a local store. A reliable basic street frock is the brown and gold spun rayon (below), boldly plaided for slim little junior miss figures. At right is another tubable spun rayon, dotted in wine or chartreuse. Its zippered jacket, though quilted all over, can be washed at home as easily as the dress

Fetching Dress of Pink and Blue Called Aid to Summer Romance

Fashion Expert Says Men Like These Colors
Shows 21-Piece Washable Wardrobe
For Girls in Display at Local Store

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

DRESS YOURSELF in pink and blue, something fresh-from-the-tub and sweet looking, and you'll wilt the heart of the most cave-man beau. That goes for the most sophisticated among you. This sage and foolproof advice comes from an expert who has studied "the clothes men like the most" and analyzed the reasons in back of their preferences.

Miss Margaret Curlett, fashion authority on fabric washability, who has been lending her services to a large Washington store for the past two days, has this observation to make: "If you want this summer to be the most romantic and mentally carefree season of your life, always keep fresh and daintily clean in washable pink or blue frocks. Better yet, wear both pink and blue together. Men like the inference these colors give—of freshness and the illusion you give of living and being in the pink of good health.

Shows 21-Piece Wardrobe

The blond stylist for a large soap organization was armed with similar advice for her attentive fashion show audience of junior misses and college girls home for the Easter holidays. These teen-aged girls, as well as business-women and young matrons, heeded Miss Curlette's suggestions about personal daintiness in dress, as well as her fashion showing of a 21-piece wardrobe. It was entirely composed of washable cottons, piques, organdies, Shantweeds, Shantel linens and even pure dye silk and spun rayon crepes. This all tub-able showing was sponsored by the junior miss department of a local department store where Miss Curlett has also been giving personal advice on care and selection of washable summer wardrobes.

Of all 21 fashion show selections, it was easy to detect that the "Dream Book" sissified styles, labeled "clothes that appeal to men," were the ones that aroused the curiosity of most of the audience. Try any of these "appealers," which Miss Curlett all but assured would land you a proposal. "Angel Child" was a novel and provocative washable dinner gown—all white in embroidered organdy. A black laced velvet camerbund prevented it from looking too cherubic. Cunning puffed sleeves zipped off at will to make a full blown evening gown for more gala occasions.

Some Washing Tips

Miss Curlett urged the utmost care in laundering the dainty sky-blue pinks of the approaching summer. The Washington heat wave can be mastered through following her rules of "selecting cool fabrics; keeping them spotless at all times; laundering removable pique neckbands or lingerie touches after every wearing; washing white gloves, hosiery and underthings every night if necessary with scrupulous attention to one's personal daintiness, and at all times feeling and looking like a band-box mannequin."

These rules are not as hard to follow as they seem, either. To prove how little time is involved in such measures—upon discovering that style-show dresses have gotten a bit soiled, Miss Curlett washes them out herself at night in her hotel room, before she leaves for her next fashion-show destination.

Paper Bedsheets Big Boon When Company Comes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IF ANYBODY had told me that I might be considering the idea of paper curtains, I'd have smiled behind my fan. But here am I all agog over some new paper chintz. In very pretty patterns, too, I might say. It's quite a new process resulting in a paper that looks and hangs softly like a fabric and has a substantial body to it. Even now there are some very pretty usable patterns available and you can expect more right along. Personally, I think it's quite a revolutionary step in home decorating. This new process-paper is called pervel.

You can also get pervel in sheets and pillow cases for full-size bed or for cribs. Dust cloths of pervel are specially treated so that they are oily, yet they can be used wet or dry . . . very soft they are, too, and without lint. The aprons of pervel appeal to me—they are very enveloping and protecting.

Of course, the real appeal of these paper things is the fact that you just throw them away when they get dirty—they're that cheap. If that isn't the answer to a lady's prayer, I don't know what is.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl of 12 Hotly Defies Divorced Mother to Marry Again; Should She Be Sent Away to School?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When quite young, I married a man whose chief interest was himself. His every want was satisfied and he came and went just as he pleased, always quarrelsome and creating scenes if I wanted to go anywhere, although I never went anywhere—unless alone or with our two children. There were quarrels at 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning when he returned home, and what it was doing to the children's nerves and mine can be imagined.

In the 14 years we lived together, he didn't spend more than 30 nights at home. Sundays and holidays always were "out," too, with the explanation that he had to work, but I learned later that he was having an affair with another woman for 13 of those 14 years. I then had myself transferred to another city, taking our daughter (six years old at the time) with me. Since then she has always had to take care of herself, and could always be depended upon.

My problem is this: I have become engaged to a man whom I love very much, and who is just the opposite of what my husband was. He is very considerate and thoughtful of the least detail. He wants to, and does, spend every possible leisure moment with me. I am now 37 and he is 39. He has been very kind to my daughter, too, inviting her to dinner and the theater and always bringing her some surprise or other. She liked him up to the moment of the engagement and then "hell broke loose."

I can hardly explain the horrible scenes and screaming she turns on when I make the least attempt at correction. She is very jealous and says she will break it up. She feels it is a disgrace to marry a second time. She claims she will be ashamed to show her face to her friends. (She is 12 now). The minute my fiance comes to the apartment she sits right there and if we go out, regardless of the time we return, she will be waiting for us. She has worked on both our nerves to the breaking point. The man has withstood all this on account of his love for me, but he tells me now that he couldn't possibly have her live with us after marriage.

What I want to know is this: Would it be cruel to place her in a Catholic academy where the nuns could discipline her better than I have? (Although I can truthfully say that the rod was never spared.) She has been accustomed to having to do things her own way while I was at work, so it would be a hardship for her. Also, she has always loved and feared her father, but still refuses to go and visit him. He could do more with her than I, but she does not care to go. Friends (and my eldest sister, who is 57 and the mother of 7) tell me that it is unwise to sacrifice one's life for one's children; that they grow up and go their own way. What is your opinion?

WORRIED MOTHER.

Parental Obligations

DEAR W. M.: There is a vast difference between "sacrificing one's life for one's children" and honorably discharging one's rightful obligations as a parent. It is the difference between stupidity and intelligence. I think you would be shirking your responsibility in this instance, if you were to place your daughter "in a Catholic academy where the nuns could discipline her," simply because she has given way to hysterical panic at the prospect of coming under a step-father's domination. She doesn't need discipline so much as she needs understanding, reassurance and assistance in analyzing, comprehending and dismissing her irrational objections to the marriage.

Reviewing the circumstances of her life from birth to the sixth year, it seems logical to assume that terror as well as shame and jealousy may be involved in her stormily defiant attitude; to suppose that buried memories of her own father's brutal nocturnal scene-making and general lack of humane consideration for his family may give rise to an instinctive dread of any man in the role of parent. Her violent rejection of your authority, dating from the hour she learned of your intention to wed, may be the savage reaction of a child who feels that her trust has been betrayed, who is convinced that she is about to be delivered into the hands of a cruel enemy, who is determined to fight that fate to the last ditch and to treat as false friend or hated antagonist anyone who would urge that fate upon her.

Her jealousy is but another symptom of fear—a feeling of fearsome social and emotional insecurity. I suppose she feels that if a stepfather were to "take over," so to speak, she would be relegated to second place in your affections and would lose her erstwhile proudly important position in the domestic scheme of things. As for her shame, students of child behavior are well acquainted with that painful and psychically disturbing embarrassment experienced by the child who must explain radically changed family relationships to contemporary-age friends.

Where parental set-ups are concerned, children are tremendous tories at heart. They cling instinctively to the conventions and distrust any departure from the status quo. Every child likes to be able to boast of two blood parents at his beck and call, and is vaguely alarmed and humiliated when deprived of that satisfaction. In instances of divorce, if the child's sense of psychic and social security is to be sustained, the custodian-parent must exercise extraordinary tact, discretion, wisdom and foresight in investing the child with an unassailable sense of rooted place and position. In cases of adopting parents, even when the child is beloved and content, where the family unit is secure and respected, it almost invariably happens the child (on discovering his status) will beg of his foster parents never to let anyone know he is not their "real child."

The proposition of parental remarriage is beset with further psychic complications for the child, if it should arise about the time he is crossing the threshold into adolescence and becoming dimly aware of the sexual aspects of life; and particularly if he has not been intelligently educated to a casual acceptance of biological facts. Some of the "shame" and "embarrassment before her friends" of which your daughter speaks may be so motivated. You may be sure that the average child of 12 years is in possession of some sort of concept of human biological and sexual phenomena; and whether it be approximately accurate and wholesome, or erroneous and morbidly distasteful, depends entirely on the source of instruction. If you have neglected this phase of your daughter's education, both you and she may be paying the penalty now.

If you or the man were to follow the respective courses which you are considering, I think you would be behaving worse than the child. That is to say, you would be making a frightful mistake in supposing, or in leading the child to believe, that this is an occasion for choosing between her and the man. And the man would be declaring the pettiness of his own nature in denying her the right to live with her family, simply because she is now running berserk with fear. Indeed, he would be piling up evidence that she is absolutely right in distrusting him—since it is an incontrovertible fact that children possess an uncanny intuitive faculty for sensing the greatness or smallness of the adult's essential character.

This crisis in your daughter's life marks what is perhaps the greatest testing ground of worth that you and the man will ever know. You have it in your power to salvage or to destroy her chances of developing into a normally happy girl and woman, wife and mother. Pack her off to school, and you may have dealt her a blow from which her personality will never fully recover; keep her with you, and you have every chance of restoring her temporarily lost confidence in human nature and in herself. As a child psychiatrist of my acquaintance says: "The place for a child is at home. It's a mother's job (and a father's) to afford the child safe convoy through emotional crises."

Since you seem as ill-equipped as your daughter to think this situation through to rational, harmonius and constructive conclusions, I recommend—most emphatically—that you enlist the services of a psychiatrist at the Child Guidance Clinic of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, in erasing the three-way conflict. It can be done, if you are willing to shoulder senior responsibility in the matter. And, take my word for it, you will be a traitor to the responsibilities of parenthood if you don't. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Don't Give Up Hope When Diet Brings Less Reduction

EVEN WHEN the pounds are clipped off with the precision of trains departing from a depot, dieting is not exactly regarded as a form of diversion. But apparently what makes a body feel like pitching the scales out the bathroom window is to diet and diet and not have the pounds go their way on schedule.

Some of you who fell in with the "Get slim for Easter" idea about six weks ago have, it seems, reached that unhappy hiatus and, if I understand you correctly, are in no mood for any more promises.

Mysterious Phenomenon

To tell you the ungilded truth, these periods of dieting without reducing can happen to the best reducers and often do. The only explanation for them is water retention and there is no explanation for water retention. What it amounts to is the replacement by water of fat burned in energy so that the loss of fat is not registered. But why it happens to some reducers and not to others or why it happens at all is a mystery.

This phenomenon has no connection with the amount of water you drink. You need at least eight glasses a day. Water with the meals, however, should be restricted to about 8 ounces.

In a way, you are lucky. You might have come up against water retention at the beginning of your program when you had every right to expect to lose rapidly because of the soft, flabby character of the fat. If you are the average reducer, you went right along and lost 3 to 4 pounds the first week, 2 pounds a week for the second, third and fourth weeks, totaling about 10 pounds for the first month.

Can Still Slenderize

Even with a steady loss, however, your losses would probably be cut down to 6 pounds for the second month and to 4 pounds for the third month. There is a tendency, you see, to ease up as you get further along in your reducing. But—pardon me!—you say you aren't losing at all! Well, you either have water retention, or you have lost all the soft fat and are now stabilizing your losses.

If you are keeping a strict account of your calorie intake, one thing is certain: You will, eventually, lose, and the amount of weight you lose will be in direct proportion to the number of calories—allowing 4,000 to 1 pound of body weight—that have been left out of your menus.

In the meantime, if you want visible results, exercise! Regardless of weight standstills, your measurements can go on improving. Your waist can be 1 inch smaller in one week, your hips 1 inch smaller in two weeks, provided you are of a mind to exercise consistently and are in condition to exercise vigorously. You cannot always lose weight on schedule, but if you do not lose inches you have only yourself to blame.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

The Circus Again Is Thrilling the New York Peasantry

New York, April 12.

THE BIG BAND is blowing the same old marches, and the Mastodonic Marvels and Blood-Sweating Behemoths are scaring the New York peasantry. So are the wondrous Wallendas on the high-wire; the Ringling Show is going through its perennial paces at Madison Square Garden this month.

Nice young John Ringling North, the present head man, says that the labor troubles which closed the big show early last season have all been sponged away, which means that its long trek across the Nation will be certain this year. New things? Oh, sure, always something new. It's my luck to be a sentimentalist about the OLD circus, and I'm firmly convinced that it was at its greatest when the late Lillian Leitzel worked in the air, and Con Colleano performed his matchless feats on the wires, when May Wirth was sole queen of the bareback riders. But new blood and tricks must constantly be pumped into the arteries of the circus to attract us old-timers and to pop the eyes of the youngsters.

There are almost no women clowns, Luly says, "because they simply won't paint their noses red. But I wasn't born very beautiful, and I don't mind." Ah, Lulu! You in the ring, red nose and all, aren't half so comical as plenty of New York ladies gotten up like genteel buffoons. But they don't know this—and we won't tell 'em, eh Lulu!

Gridiron Dinner Saturday Night Signals Host of Week-end Parties

Writers, Politicians and Many Other Celebrities Converge on Washington; The Lloyd Starks Among Visitors

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

WHAT A WEEK-END this will be! With shoals of celebrities arriving tomorrow and the next day for the Gridiron dinner Saturday night, the social calendar will be crowded down to the last minute through Saturday and Sunday, and even over into next week.

A flurry of parties will center around Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri and Mrs Stark, who will arrive tomorrow night or early Saturday morning for a brief stay. Mrs. Stark will entertain at a luncheon on Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel, and that evening while her husband is making merry at the Gridiron dinner, she will be in the party of 16 "Gridiron Widows" entertained by Mrs. Raymond P. Brandt.

A high-light of the week-end festivities will be the Sunday morning breakfast given by Judge and Mrs. Harry W. Blair in their Alexandria home. Straight from Missouri themselves, the Blairs will have among their guests a number of others from the "show-me State," including Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark. Another breakfast on the Sunday morning calendar is the one Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Andrews will give for Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Adams, the former of whom is better known as "F. P. A."

Marquis James, noted author and Pulitzer-prize winner, and Mrs. James will arrive Saturday afternoon to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Emi Hurja, at their home on California street. The Jameses, who frequently drive down from their place in Pleasanton, N. Y., will be here this time until Tuesday. "Mark" James, as the writer is known to his friends, will be among the topflight celebrities adding luster to the Gridiron party, and on the following evening he and Mrs. James will be feted at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Hurja.

Many Notables to Attend Sunday Party

Climaxing the Gridiron round of events will be the reception Sunday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman will entertain in honor of the president of the Gridiron Club, Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Clapper. Celebrities by dozens and scores . . . Democrats and Republicans . . . Presidential possibilities . . . Gridiron members and their guests will be there around 500 strong.

Don't be surprised if, in looking over that company, you glimpse such "big names" as District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Dr. Arthur E. Hertzer (The Horse and Buggy Doctor"—due to arrive at the Malflower Saturady morning; Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts (he's coming down from Boston with quite a large party); Sumner Blossom, editor of American Magazine, and any number of other Governors, editors and columnists.

Already in town is Thomas Mann, famous writer, who, with Mrs. Mann, arrived early yesterday and will be here until Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer. The visitors will be honored at a dinner tonight and at a tea on Saturday afternoon given by Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, and tomorrow evening they will be dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woods, going on later to the musical given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at Dumbarton Oaks.

Last evening, Dr. and Mrs. Mann were in a party attending the National Symphony concert conducted by Bruno Walter, and later they were guests at the supper party given by Mrs. Tracy Dows in honor of Mr. Walter and Mrs. Vincent Astor. There were about 50 guests, among them being the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., who, with Mrs. Astor and Olin Dows, were in Mrs. Dows' box at the concert.

Roy Roberts To Be Feted

To go back to the Gridiron party and festivities swirling around it—one of the first on the list will be the stag party to be given tomorrow night by Jouett Shouse at Wolf-Trap Farm. Guest of honor for the event will be Roy Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: Mrs. Harry B. Hawes has cards out for a luncheon on Wednesday, April 26, in honor of Mrs. William B. Hankhead . . . Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose will entertain at luncheon on Saturday at the Shoreham, taking her guests on to the afternoon performance of "Hoofprints of 1939" . . . Mrs. Stanley Woodward will entertain at a cocktail party on Tuesday, April 18 . . . Mrs. Emerson Howe will be hostess at dinner on Saturday night . . . Justice Elwin Page, of the Newhampshire Supreme Court, and Mrs. Page are spending two weeks in Washington to be with their son, Robertson Page, who is connected with a news bureau here . . . Mr. and Mrs. Coulter Wells will give a cocktail party this afternoon . . . Mrs. Junior Owens has planned a luncheon for Monday, her honor guests being Mrs. Donald Sterling and Mrs. Phillips Jackson, of Portland, Oreg., whose husbands will attend the Gridiron dinner . . . Mr. and Mrs. Dana Belsher have cards out for a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon.

Luncheon Given By Mrs. Howe

Mrs. Emerson Howe entertained at luncheon yesterday at 1 o'clock at her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue for 14 guests.

Receiving her guests in the drawing room, Mrs. Howe was gowned in black. In the dining room a color scheme of spring yellow prevailed, with yellow daisies and yellow roses on the table and tall yellow tapers in the candelabra.

Ranking guests were Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic; Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Senator from Florida; Mrs. William D. Byron, wife of the Representative from Marylnad, and Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, who left later for South Bend, Ind., where she will give two lectures.

Ruth Hitchcock To Entertain Mrs. Gordon

Mrs. English Gordon, who returned yesterday to her home in Philadelphia, will be back in town the first of May for a visit of several more weeks as the guest of Miss Ruth Hitchcock. Miss Hitchcock plans to open her house on R street at that time.

During her recent stay here, Mrs. Gordon was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Rinkenstaedt. She was en route North after a visit to Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury at the latter's place in Palm Beach.

Chamberlains Guests Here

On their way from the Orient to Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Will Henry Chamberlain are stopping in Washington to be the house guests of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. During the Chamberlains' 12 years in the Far East, he served as foreign correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor.

In Japan, Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain were friends of Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor's son-in-law and daughter, Cabot Coville, second secretary of the United States Embassy and Mrs .Coville.

Also with the Grosvenors is their niece, Miss Louise Grosvenor, who is on her spring holiday from Foxcroft School. She is the sister of Miss Anne Grosvenor, who made her debut at Wild Acres, the Grosvenor home, two years ago.

Miss Gloria Grosvenor is expected today from Cambridge, Mass., where she has been spending her Easter vacation.

Dr. Durand, Wife Depart for Europe

Dr. E. Dana Durand, member of the United States Tariff Commission, and Mrs. Durand and Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, former United States surgeon general, were among the passengers sailing yesterday on the President Harding for Southampton, Havre and Hamburg.

On the same ship were L. J. Markwardt, chief of the timber mechanics division of the United States Forest Products Laboratory, and Col. and Mrs. Charles C. Cresson.

Green Grow the Gardens Of Washington in Spring

Mrs. Frank Blake Miller (below) is another Washingtonian who has been caught in the current epidemic of spring fever sweeping the town. She is clipping sprays of blossoms which will be used for flower decorations inside her home in Georgetown

The first flower is no longer a novelty this season to Mrs. William Kerkam (above) so she is giving her attention at this moment to "garden fixtures." Here she is applying a new coat of paint to the old-fashioned lamp which decorates a corner of her "ferned grot"

The McBrides Hosts at Party

Cocktail time yesterday found Miss Isabel Moore and James Sansbury May, of Anderson, Ind., shaking hands with dozens of people at the party given in their honor by Col. and Mrs. Robert Bruce McBride. The visitors from Indiana are house guests of the McBrides at their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren.

Mrs. McBride, who, with Miss Moore, received her guests in the drawing room, was gowned in a black hostess gown with a corsage of gardenias on her shoulder. Miss Moore wore a tea gown of spring print brocade and a corsage of gardenias. In the dining room an exquisitely embroidered tea cloth covered the table which was centred by a bowl of red roses. The room was lighted by the glow from tall white tapers set in crystal candelabra

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks At 75th Club Party

She Is Guest of Honor at Luncheon To Benefit Crippled Student; Gives Highlights of Trip West

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor yesterday at the annual benefit luncheon of the Seventy-fifth Club, proceeds of which will be used to aid Francis Lansdale, a student at Langdon School for Crippled Children. The affair, at Hotel Twenty-Four Hundred Sixteenth Street, was attended by nearly 200 members and guests. Mrs. William T. Byrne, the president, presided and Mrs. John R. Murdock, the first president of the club, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt.

The organization's interest in Francis Lansdale began three years ago when it was first started. The members learned his wheel chair had been stolen and purchased a chair and presented it to him in the name of Mrs. Roosevelt. Since then, the club has continued its aid to the boy and yesterday, as before, made the gift toward his education in honor of the First Lady. Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, of California, made the formal announcement of the purpose of the luncheon.

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke briefly, responding to a request that she give highlights of her trip West. "For me, the highest light was the new grandson," she said, 'but everyone did not approve of that attitude. I received an amusing letter from a woman who wrote: 'I've always thought that you were a sensible woman but since reading your column where you make such a fuss about your daughter's having a baby, I've decided you are just a plain fool like the rest of us.'"

Praises San Francisco World's Fair

Mrs. Roosevelt warmed the hearts of the Californians in the audience with her praise of the San Francisco Fair. "The setting is perfectly enchanting," she said. "I don't think we can compete with that in New York." She described the beauty of the flowers, the trees and the water, and also the Federal exhibit, especially that devoted to the American Indian.

She said she also enjoyed the restoration of historical places in San Antonio, but pointed to the contrast between that part of the city and the slums where the clearance program was moving slowly. She made a personal discovery about freight rates when she bought some grapefruit for $1.10 in the Rio Grande Valley and paid $1 to ship them home, she said.

She remarked on the great interest in the study of international affairs which she found in the West. "It makes us realize how much more people are thinking about such things."

Music Featured On Program

At the close of her talk, a song written in her honor was sung by Miss Berenice Alarie, of the Juilliard School in New York, guest soloist for the occasion. Miss Alarie, whose soprano voice is of clear, lovely quality, sang two groups of songs, accompanied in the first at the piano by Luis Guzman, of the Marine Band Orchestra, and in the second by Mme. Amelie Conti, harpist, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Another young artist who shared the program with Miss Alarie was Reine Luoma, pianist. Music was provided through the luncheon by the Marine Band Orchestra, under the direction of W. F. Santelmann, second leader.

The programs at each place had on the cover, "Pines on the Potomac," an etching by Minnie L. Briggs, and a poem, "Golden Gift," by Mrs. Byrne, the club president.

Club to Honor Lady Marler

Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, will be guest of honor at a luncheon at which Senator Arthur Capper will entertain members of the women's safety committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club at luncheon in the dining room of the Senate Tuesday. This luncheon has been announced by Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the committee, as the second of two events for the group next week. Lady Marler has been invited as the honor guest because of the similarity between the traffic problems of Canada and the United States.

Monday the members will meet in the board room of the American Automobile Association and from there will motor to Abbot Vocational School in which the committee is much interested. It is advocating the school's removal from the present old building on O street, between Sixth and Seventh, to a new location where traffic does not present such a hazard and where there will be proper facilities for the vocational program which is the most extensive in the city.

"This school is of great importance," said Mrs. Thorpe. "Five hundred boys are in training there to become self-supporting citizens."

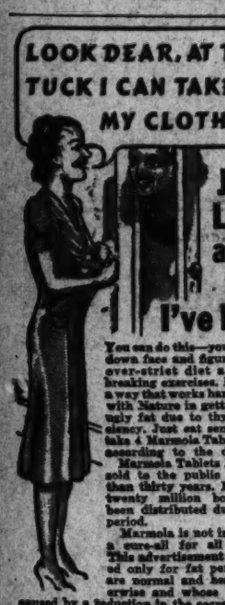
Girl Scouts to Leave

The junior camp committee of Camp May Flather of the Washington Girl Scouts leaves today for its spring trip to the camp near Harrisonburg, Va., with Mrs. Joel F. Watson, the chairman, and Miss Florence Jennings, director. They will return Sunday.

The Girl Scouts on this committee who will make the trip are Katherine Ann Riggleman, chairman; Betty Rogers, Sibley Rogers, Florence Crawford, Lorraine Green, Barbara Kurz, Edith Betts, Connie Campbell.



You can do this—you can slim down face and figure without over-strict diet and back-breaking exercises. For here's a way that works hand in hand with Nature in getting rid of ugly fat due to thyroid deficiency. Just eat sensibly and take 4 Marmola Tablets a day, according to the directions.

Marmola Tablets have been sold to the public for more than thirty years. More than twenty million boxes have been distributed during that period.

Marmola is not intended as a cure-all for all ailments. This advertisement is intended only for fat persons who are normal and healthy otherwise and whose fatness is caused by a reduction in the secretion from the thyroid gland (hypo-thyroidism) with accompanying subnormal metabolic rates. No other representation is made as to this treatment except under these conditions and according to the dosage as recommended.

We do not make any diagnosis as that is the function of your physician, who must be consulted for that purpose. The formula is included in every package. Get a box of Marmola today from your druggist.

2 Parties Scheduled at Y. W. C. A. Tonight and Tomorrow Night

Mexican Fiesta, Sponsored by Membership Department, Will Be Followed by Reserves Party

Two large parties are to be held at the Y. W. C. A. The Mexican fiesta, sponsored by the membership department, is scheduled tonight in Barker Hall, and the annual supper and homecoming of the Girl Reserves will be tomorrow night. The Mexican "atmosphere" will be cleared away and Barker Hall will also be the scene of the Girl Reserve celebration which will resemble a college reunion.

The Girl Reserves, Blue Triangle Club, Health Education Department, Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, Industrial Girls Clubs, and Strong Residence Girls will all participate in the fiesta tonight. There will be Mexican selections by the Xenos Band, dances by George Seymour, Margaret Mowbray and Fred Horton; accordion numbers by Sylvia Kaplowitz' Keyboard Kapers and songs by Betty Ann Worrall, Betty Faulkner and Mary Hastings.

Miss Virginia Sholah, recreation secretary, is in charge of the program, with Miss Mary Burnett, music secretary, directing the music.

The committee on arrangements includes Miss Jessie Smith, Miss Boneita Sweet, Miss Marie Mague, Mrs. Earle Wilfley, Miss Katharine Wilfley, Miss Patsy Murphy and Miss Louise Danforth.

The Senior Girl Reserve Council and Glee Club will be hostesses to former council presidents and all Girl Reserves tomorrow at the homecoming. The invitation list stretches back 20 years and special effort has been made to reach girls now in George Washington, Maryland and American Universities, Wilson Teachers' College and the local business colleges. Supper reservations may be made up to noon today.

Mrs. Sholar is directing the playlet of five scenes, depicting the movie type of college life, starting with an early morning pillow fight, feminine plotting in a drug store, lusty cheers for alma mater at a football game, and progressing to the "blind date" who made good at the big "prom."

Ann Davis, president of the Senior Girl Reserve Council, plays the "Blind Date;" Estyleene Lawson and Emma Dorr, the girl friends; Nancy Mobley, the waitress; June Felker and Alice Hynson, cheerleaders; Sue McNeely, Betty Ann Worrall, Edward Shipley, James Tarbett and James Williamson, the dancers; and Mary Hastings, Harriet Wold, Betty Young and Mabel Klebold, the quartet who sing Mildred Chapin's "Ho Hum It's a Sin to Rise Early!"

During the "Prom" intermission the Glee Club will give a short program under the direction of Miss Burnett, accompanied by Mrs. John Burlew.

Mrs. Herbert Day, first chairman of the Washington Girl Reserve department of the Y. W. C. A., will be a guest; also, Miss Elsa Peterson, former chairman, and Miss Mabel R. Cook is Girl Reserve executive in Washington.

Rose d'Amore Plays Tomorrow

Rose d'Amore, concert pianist, tomorrow afternoon will make her annual appearance before the Congressional Club at its clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue.

Miss d'Amore's program will include a Chopin group and the "Waltzer" of Leo Delibes. Her programs for piano concerts carry short resumes of the works she is interpreting.

Her next appearance with a symphony orchestra will be May 2, when she heads the May festival, under the auspices of All Souls' Unitarian Church at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets. Fifteen members of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Kurt Hetzel, will accompany her in the "Concerto in D Minor" by Mozart.

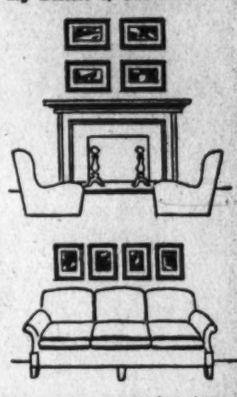
Hanging Pictures Requires Thought

says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.



The framing and hanging of pictures is very important in wall decoration. It's a subject far too involved to discuss at length in this short space. Certain essentials, however, can be mentioned. Reproductions of oil paintings need heavy frames, and no glass. Smaller gilt frames may be used on formal pictures for period rooms. Oriental prints and modern pictures are best framed with light mats and simple frames. Hang your pictures on the wall that seems most conspicuously empty. Hang your small pictures at eye level . . . the larger ones a bit higher. When several pictures are hung on one wall, group them in geometrical relation to the furniture above which they hang.

Consult "Mary Annette" or any of our other Decorators, at any time, without any obligation or cost whatsoever; or, if you prefer an appointment, Call National 5100, Branch 500.

Folk Fete Said To Give Light On the Indians

Beatty Says It Will Clear Up a Number Of Popular Delusions

The National Folk Festival will get rid of many popular delusions about the American Indian and furnish the public with greater sympathy for his race in the opinion of Willard W. Beatty, director of education for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

BEATTY

"The festival should help white people to a realization of the fact that the Indians possessed a culture that was colorful and at the same time profound," he said yesterday.

"Some form of art experience was part of their daily existence. Their music, dancing and sense of decorative design entered into almost every phase of their lives—and was much more important to them than our art is to us."

As an example he pointed to an exquisite Indian bean pot on a shelf in his office. "Their point of view," he explained, "was that anything they had around them must be useful but that it must be beautiful as well. We are satisfied with anything that is merely useful, and as a result we collect junk."

Beatty is co-operating to bring several tribes of Indians to the National Folk Festival, which opens April 27 at Constitution Hall. In addition to the Kiowas, from Oklahoma, who have appeared in the annual festivals each year, the Indian office has arranged for the participation of a group of Zunis and Mescalero Apaches from New Mexico.

As director of education, a position he has held for two years, Beatty has charge of the schooling of some 86,000 Indian children. He came to the Indian Office from Bronxville, N. Y., where he was superintendent of public schools.

Tickets for the sixth annual National Folk Festival at Constitutional Hall, April 27-29, are on sale at The Washington Post Building, 1337 E street northwest, daily and Sunday from 8 a. m. until midnight. Prices for the matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $2. A different program will be presented at each performance.

Mrs. Mary Parks Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Freeman Parks, 71, resident of this city for 40 years, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Lee's funeral chapel, with private burial in Jacksonville, Ill., her birthplace. Mrs. Parks died Monday at her home, 6303 Georgia street, Chevy Chase, Md.

She was a member of the Political Study Club, the Chevy Chase Woman's Club and the Richard Arnold Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She was also a member of the All Saints Episcopal Church in Chevy Chase.

She is survived by her husband, Granville N. Parks, retired architect; a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Parks Yoder, and a granddaughter.

Geological Tour Of District Planned

Donald Edward McHenry, naturalist with the National Park Service, will conduct a geological tour through the District and up the Potomac, from 2 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. Sunday.

Buses will leave 1416 F street northwest at 1:30 p. m., while private cars will meet at Thirty-sixth and Prospect avenue northwest at 2 p. m. The tour was arranged by Dr. Ray S. Bassler, curator of geology at the Smithsonian Institution, and Howard E. Rothrock, acting chief naturalist of the Park Service.

Life's Final Mystery Calls S. S. Van Dine

S. S. VAN DINE

Philo Vance Creator Dies at 51 of Heart Attack

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 12.—S. S. Van Dine, the man who set the clever Philo Vance sleuthing through the pages of 11 first-rate murder mysteries, is dead.

He was Willard Huntington Wright, 51, and by that name he was known as a scholar, critic, editor and esthetic until a nervous breakdown turned his thoughts away from Nietzsche, modern painting and anthropology to the less ponderous but more engaging subject of who killed whom and why.

Wright collapsed last night in his home and died of heart disease. His body will be cremated tomorrow.

A native of Charlottesville, Va., Wright spent his youth in California and attended St. Vincent's College, the University of Southern California and Pomona College. He went to Harvard and afterward continued his education in Europe.

He became literary editor of the Los Angeles Times and at various times was literary critic of Town Topics, editor of the Smart Set magazine, art critic of the Forum and of the International Studio, literary editor of the New York Evening Mail, music and art editor of the San Francisco Bulletin and art critic of Hearst's International Magazine.

The name of Willard Huntington Wright in those days meant scholarly attainments.

And then the breakdown came in 1923. For three years he was confined to his home, with heavy reading forbidden. He turned to detective fiction, and somewhere along the line came the glimmer of a challenge to write better detective tales. By the time he was ready to leave his bed he had created Philo Vance, and had plotted a 30,000-word synopsis of three murder mysteries.

The first, "The Benson Murder Case," was published in 1926. The others followed regularly: "The Canary Murder Case," "The Greene Murder Case," "The Bishop Murder Case," "The Scarab Murder Case," "The Kennel Murder Case," "The Dragon Murder Case," "The Casino Murder Case," and the others.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

by the House of Worsted-Tex

The model that fits and flatters all 8 builds of men.

IT takes more than a piece of cloth and some stitches to make a British Lounge V-8. The basic design of this exclusive model and the superior tailoring with which it's executed leave no room for a poor fit.

It just HAS to improve a man's appearance. Your shape is "built-in," not "pressed-in." The man behind the seams is a master of his trade. The lowered waistline, the slightly longer jacket, the wider lapels, the extra chest folds, the tapered sleeves and trousers . . . these are no accidents. They occur by design . . . a design that yields the best looking suit to make a man look his best; an illusion of height and slimness and chest development.

Zoning Board Hears Pleas Of Citizens

Complaints Against Fern Place Houses To Go Before Corporation Counsel

Whether a man has the right to put his front door on the side of his residence and whether it is then the front door were questions heatedly argued before the Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday afternoon as two citizens groups sought to stop construction of 11 single-family dwellings on Fern place northwest.

Contending that the building permits obtained by Claude Livingston for erection of the homes were given without due consideration for District zoning laws, W. C. Magathan, president of Takoma, D. C., citizens, asked the board to issue a "cease and desist" order against the builder.

He was supported by George Corbin, president of Manor Park Citizens Association and several residents of the area, who told the board they had been led to believe they "would get short shrift if we tried to tell our side down here."

Front Door on Side

With six model houses to illustrate their points, Magathan and Corbin declared: "He even had to put the front door on the side. If he had turned the houses around the right way, they would have overlapped. The law plainly says houses of the District must have front doors facing on the street."

John W. Oehmann, who appeared to defend issuance of the permits, said: "It's absurd to claim a side door is a front door, just because it is the principal door. A front door is the door on the front of the house. Each of these houses has one."

Oehmann also pointed out that Livingston was building brick homes, although frame houses would have done for the zoning requirements of the neighborhood; was building houses that were 16 feet wide, although they could have been only 14 feet in width, and had limited the number of his stories to two, although he could have gone up to three.

Unable to be specific as to how the 11 homes "are actually violating te building code," Magathan declared: "It's not just a question of 11 little houses, but of hundreds of such little houses that are beating their way in all over the District."

Theodore I. Coe, chairman of the board, interrupted him many times, urging him to "show us where."

"I have to argue it this way. I can't be specific when it's a matter of law like this," Magathan maintained.

To Seek Ruling

"If it is a matter of law, the board craves an opinion from the Corporation Counsel and would urge you to file a petition with that office, too," Coe said. "So far as I can see, until someone shows me better, you are not talking about things over which we have jurisdiction."

The citizens group, after almost two hours, said they would file a petition with the Corporation Counsel.

Among eight other pleas heard by the board was one from the American Red Cross, Washington and Lee University and William and Mary College—asking permission to rent the historic Judge Barton residence at 1601 I street northwest "to the first tenants we have found."

The tenants would be the workaday forces of the Central Housing Committee and the Prison Industries Administration, both Federal Government agencies. The schools and the Red Cross argued that the home had cost them $10,000 in taxes since it was given to them and that the two prospective rental groups were educational, as required by the zoning law for that neighborhood.

Rhode Island Avenue

Doubling the force of investigators of the Public Assistance Bureau would assure the efficient expenditure of funds for dependent persons, Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the bureau, declared last night.

Some investigators at the present time, she told the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, are compelled to supervise as many as 300 families. She emphasized that more than half the funds for relief and public assistance here are used to aid colored people.

Explaining that approximately 1,500 families are "rehabilitated" each month, she pointed out that there is little decrease in the public assistance roll because there is a constant influx into the city of needy individuals.

The organization urged payment of tuition for nonresident students in District schools and opposed legislation making illegal the sale of retail merchandise below the listed price. A bill adding 3 cents to the tax on fuel oil for homes also was disapproved by the group. Forty-two new members were admitted.

Michigan Park

Support for the Parent-Teachers Association in its census of children who are expected to attend the Bunker Hill School next fall was voted last night by Michigan Park Citizens Association.

The unit thanked Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, for securing an appropriation for the construction and supervision of the Turkey Thicket Playground on Michigan avenue, between Perry and Shepherd streets northeast.

Boy, 18, Shatters Police Window To Get Into Jail

Hungry and homeless, an 18-year-old boy yesterday threw a rock through the window of Capt. Oscar Letterman's office at the Fourth Precinct station and then walked inside and admitted the deed.

An hour before the occurrence, police explained, he had asked to be locked up, saying he was hungry and without a place to sleep. He was told then he had done nothing wrong and couldn't be incarcerated.

Danced With Ohio Society

Ohio State Society danced last night at the Raleigh Hotel and Mary Garney (left) and Mrs. Paul Ashbrook were among those who attended

Woodrow Wilson undoubtedly will be remembered as the greatest American of the time between Presidents Benjamin Harrison and Franklin D. Roosevelt, because he "evolved the principles upon which the League of Nations was founded," Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, said last night.

In address before the Ohio State Society at the Raleigh Hotel, he said "Wilson was tested in the crucible of war and was not found wanting."

Officers elected were Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, president; Representative White (Republican), of Ohio; Mrs. Wilson Compton and Strickland Gillilan, vice presidents; Dr. J. Frank Kendrick and Mrs. J. W. Duvel, members of the governing committee; Miss Irene Neikirk, treasurer; A. R. Williams, secretary, and S. J. Hass, historian.

Ernest H. Van Fossan, member of the Board of Tax Appeals, presided, and Miss Arista Huber had charge of entertainment.

Bolles Assails D. C. Sales Tax And Deficit

Citizens Committee Hears Lawmaker And Schoenthal

The proposed sales tax was denounced last night as a chisel "from people least able to pay it" by Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, before the citizens committee on fair taxation.

"I am utterly and absolutely opposed to the sales tax," he told the gathering in the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida avenue northwest.

"Like many easily collected taxes," he shouted, "it is taken from people who can't fight it.

"I am going to oppose the sales tax and I am opposing the District tax bill because they are both smelly."

He declared "there is no more sense in the National Capital having a deficit than there is right in a Congressman making a lot of money out of his salary."

Bolles denounced existing conditions at Gallinger Hospital, where "the violently insane are tied in their beds" and dubbed the action "an inhuman thing done in the Middle Ages and perpetuated in Washington, D. C., the Capital of the United States of America."

He advocated adoption of a graduated income tax for the District and was joined in the proposal by Arthur Schoenthal, vice president of the Building Trades Council.

Arthur Bernstein, chairman of the research committee, asked defeat of the sales tax.

Would Dare Canyon Again, Woman Says

Congregational Circle Hears One of First Two to Complete Trip

The second or third woman to travel down the Colorado River at the bottom of the Grand Canyon told the Mount Pleasant Circle of the First Congregational Church about it last night.

The first woman who attempted the trip, about ten years ago, went with her husband on their wedding trip. They disappeared at Bright Angel Train and were never found.

Miss Lois Jotter, a postgraduate student of the University of Michigan, daughter of Dr. E. V. Jotter, of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture here, was accompanied by Dr. Elzada Clover, instructor in botany at the university, and a party of men. Both women survived, and the question of which was the second to attempt the trip is moot.

Miss Jotter said she would be glad to repeat the trip, but not "right away," when questioned after the illustrated lecture she gave. The expedition was to gather botanical specimens, some of which were so novel that they were sent to the Department of Agriculture here for identification.

Reports that the explorers were lost last July grew out of the fact that a portage put them four days behind schedule. The trip covered 660 miles in 42 days.

Post Writer Wins Safety Prize Again

Howard Wentworth Gets $250 C. I. T. Award at N. Y. for Traffic Articles

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 12.—Howard Wentworth, veteran traffic reporter for The Washington Post, was awarded the $250 second prize in the 1938 C. I. T. Safety Foundation contest, here tonight. In 1936 he won the first prize and the following year was granted second place.

Grand award of $5,000 went to Sidney J. Williams, of the National Safety Council, for his contribution to the cause of highway safety.

Arthur O. Dietz, president of Commercial Investment Trust, Inc., sponsor of the foundation, asserted in announcing the awards that last year was the turning point in the tide of highway safety.

More Lives Saved

"During 1938," he said, "a net gain of 19 per cent was shown in lives saved. This means that the combined efforts of all who are working toward safety — our millions of motorists, our State and civil officials, as well as the safety experts—affected a saving of more than 8,000 lives during the year. Could there be any richer reward for effort?"

Williams, in accepting the grand award, paid tribute to the broad front on which the campaign against the high motor vehicle toll is being waged.

He emphasized that the many forces combined for highway safety "are showing a troubled world what democracy can do when it takes off its coat, for the soul of safety is co-operation and its leadership is earned, not imposed."

Yale Director Speaks

Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Yale bureau for traffic research, gave a brief appraisal of the year of 1938 in traffic safety. Phillip W. Haberman, vice president and general counsel of C. I. T., presided at the ceremonies, part of which were broadcast nationally over the blue network of the N. B. C.

Other awards to reporters writing the "best stories or series of stories on traffic accidents or hazards of a descriptive nature and preferably productive of worthwhile changes in traffic control or public driving care" were:

First, $500, David Cogswell, Des Moines Register and Tribune; third, $100, Gordon Davis, Cleveland Press; fourth, $50, Jack Drury, Nashville Banner.

Ten honorable mentions of $25 each went to Ed Ainsworth, Los Angeles Times; George J. Challis, Salinas, Calif., Post and Index Journal; Richard Fowler, Kansas City Star; Alistair Germain, Troy Record and Newsmen; Joseph M. Korem, Canton Repository; A. Wes Dusen, Gary Post-Tribune; Harry Volk, Cleveland News; George R. Waite, Louisville Courier-Journal; Beverly Wallace, Macon Telegraph and News, and Clifford B. Ward, Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

Best editorials

To editorial writers producing "the best single editorial or series of editorials the following awards were made:

First and $500, Roy Elliott, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle; second, $250, Reginald M. Cleveland, automobile editor, the New York Times; third, $100, Richard Fowler, Kansas City Star; fourth, $50, Lewis T. Nordyke, Amarillo Globe-News, and four honorable mentions with $25 each to E. Clay Ferree, Winston-Salem Journal and Twin City Sentinel; E. W. Keever, Dayton Journal and Herald; F. W. Luening Milwaukee Journal, and E. J. Macklin, Waukesan News-Sun.

To camera men—First and $300, Don Downie, Pasadena Star-News and Post; second, $150, R. A. Riley, Miami News; third, $75, Stewart D. Gross, Saginaw News; fourth, $25, Harris Nowell, Milwaukee Journal.

Bronze plaques were awarded to the National Broadcasting Company for its program "Sunday Drivers," with recognition also to its program "No School Today," also designated Station WOAR, Cleveland, to receive the Foundation's local radio station award of a bronze plaque for the most effective utilization of its facilities.

The motion picture award of a bronze plaque, went to the industrial motion picture "Knights of the Highway" sponsored by the Chevrolet motor division of the General Motors Sales Corporation, which was shown after the dinner.

Catholic Student Peace Crusaders Hold Dance

Students Told Church Alone Can Save World

Peace Federation Of Catholic Association Hears Mgr. Ready

The Church alone can save the world from its present condition of despair, confusion and moral depravity, Mgr. Michael J. Ready told the Student Peace Federation of the Catholic Association for International Peace at a luncheon in the Mayflower.

Comparing modern conditions to those at the time of Christ's birth, Mgr. Ready declared the Church would save the world again, as it had then. "Today more than ever, the Catholic Church's voice can be a vigorous call to the whole world to lead in a crusade for peace," he said.

Catholic social teaching was discussed by William Stewart, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., as a remedy for the crisis. He urged recognition of the primacy of God, rather than state, nation, or class; the primacy of morality, rather than expediency, profit, or national honor; and a renewed dedication to duties rather than individual rights as guiding principles.

The opposition between Catholic Christian principles and the principles of dictator states, where God is dethroned and the individual made insignificant to glorify the state, was stressed by Jeanne Wotell, of River Forest, Ill.

Library Society

Legislation pending in Congress to extend Federal aid to libraries was reviewed before the Catholic Library Association yesterday by Dr. George Johnson, secretary of the National Catholic Education Association, at a luncheon meeting over which the Most Rev. John McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, presided.

John W. Cronin, of the Library of Congress, was principal speaker in the discussion of cataloguing and classification; the Rev. Max Satory, of Winona, Miss., discussed college libraries; the Rev. William J. McGucken, S. J., of St. Louis, discussed high school libraries, and Louis Latimer, of the Washington Public Library, discussed elementary school libraries.

Capital News In Brief

8 Children Hurt Here

John Perry, 4, of 3217 Volta place northwest, suffered a broken leg; Robert E. Via, 9, of 3029 Vista place northeast, cuts and bruises on his legs, and U. Frost Fletcher, 14, of 1318 Thirty-fifth street northwest, a fractured right foot, when they stepped in front of automobiles.

William Volney Jones, 14, of 3302 M street northwest, broke his right shoulder sliding bases in a ball game, and Robert Callow, 8, of 1848 T street southeast, was struck near the left eye by a stone.

Jack Zoll, 14, of 116 Sixth street southeast, ran his wagon into a tree and had both his legs severely cut, while Ralph Heath, 13, of 514 Fifth street northwest, broke his left leg when he fell off the fence outside the Juvenile Court Building, Fourth and E streets.

James Ford, 8, colored, of 158 N street southeast, was in a serious condition at Gallinger Hospital after falling off the roof of a shed behind his home and fracturing his skull.

All in Mail to Congress

A Congressman can expect almost anything when he opens his mail nowadays—if it comes from a constituent, according to Seymour S. Guthman, secretary to Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York.

Speaking at the Jewish Community Center last night, Guthman said constituent letters can be classified in four categories: those asking for jobs; demanding (or volunteering) information; those seeking advice, legal and otherwise; and in recent years, mimeographed telegrams of propaganda groups that flood in on the eve of Congressional action on legislation.

In general, constituent letters are getting more exacting, Guthman said, but it is the housewife who now does most of the "writing to the Congressman," he asserted.

Four Injured As Sightseeing Car Overturns

Bruises, Lacerations And Shock Suffered In Virginia Crash

Four persons escaped with minor injuries yesterday when a sightseeing car overturned near River Bend, Va., after the driver had swerved to avoid a second automobile.

They are Leonard Oretz, 450 Ninth street northwest, driver; Sallie Giairantano, 27; Charles Giairantano, 27, and Oscar Schwabel, 30, all of Brooklyn N. Y.

The four were raced to Emergency Hospital by Max Hershman, of 110 Longfellow street northwest. All suffered bruises, lacerations and shock.

Fred Cohen, 74, of 604 Farragut street northwest, suffered a fractured leg and a severed tendon yesterday when felled by a car at Twelfth street at E northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Also taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for chest injuries was Mabel A. Bohrer, 30, of 3703 Albemarle street, whose car was in collision with a taxicab at Connecticut avenue and Porter street

'Isms Appeal Laid at Door Of Church

Dr. Leiper Asserts Youth Not Taught True Philosophy Of Christianity

The failure of the church to "get across" convincingly the fact that Christianity has a "satisfying philosophy" of life is making American youth ripe for the appeals of "isms," Dr. Henry Smith Leiper warned last night at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Executive secretary of the Universal Christian Council of Life and Work, American section, he addressed the annual conference of the Associated Church Press, speaking on the same program with Dr. Sidney E. Goldstein, associate rabbi, the Free Synagogue, New York City.

The failure, Dr. Leiper stressed, is not in Christianity, itself, but in its presentation. America has a great chance, he said, to build up something that will be stronger than the 'isms, particularly the movement in Germany, which "innoculates its youth with the virus of national socialism."

Dr. Leiper said that the 'isms hate eight of the things we all revere, whether we be Catholics, Protestanas or Jews.

He listed them as faith in God as the universal father of all mankind; faith in the brotherhood of men; faith in man's supreme obligation to do the will of God as revealed in Christ; faith in the ultimate power of love over brute force; faith in the unique value of human personality; devotion to the truth as something binding upon all men; reverence for the universal moral law of God, and faith in the achievement of lasting peace as both desirable and possible.

Most Newsies Excluded From Child Labor Rules

The Children's Bureau of the Labor Department ruled yesterday that the child labor provisions of the wage-hour act applied to newsboys under 16 only in cases where they obtained newspapers in the plants in which they were printed.

Elisha Hanson, general counsel for the American Publishers Association, said the ruling would have the effect of excluding most newsboys from the act.

"Practically all newspapers are delivered to the boys by truck on street corners or at substations," he said.

"I agree with the ruling of the Children's Bureau because the law itself is restricted in its application to work performed in or about establishments producing goods for commerce."

Reported Slain on Battlefield, Confederate, 92, Is Much Alive

EMMETT M. WALLER

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

For a man who officially was reported killed in action at Murfreesboro in 1862, Emmett M. Waller is a lively cuss. If it is his wraith who is custodian and bookkeeper of All Souls' Church and who looks after the interests of indigent widows and children of Confederate veterans in this area—well, Tennesseeans make energetic spooks.

Yesterday was Waller's extra-busy day and for that reason he asked for a da"s postponement on the interview but gallantly yielded upon being informed that the "Life Begins at 70" department purposely tries to see its subjects at their busiest. He was engaged in supervising the mimeographing and stacking of hundreds of copies of the All Souls' annual financial statement, which he had prepared, and he is a stickler for getting his work out with punctuality.

Just two months this side of 92, Waller toils with the drive and efficiency of any specimen half a century younger that you can think of.

Born in Fayette County, Tenn., on June 28, 1847, he was a lad of 13 when he joined the Confederate Army as a drummer boy a few weeks after the firing on Fort Sumter. He was at Shiloh and, later, was so seriously wounded at Murfreesboro he was left for dead.

But the Federals came along, detected a spark of life, sent him to a base hospital as a prisoner. Meantime he had been reported slain.

"When I got well enough to leave the hospital," says Mr. Waller, "they let me go out and play marbles with the other children in the village. Nevertheless I became very homesick. One day a Union officer found me crying and asked me what was wrong. I told him and the next thing you know I was being put on a train for Memphis, my home. That was right nice of the Federals, wasn't it?"

He reached his home, all right, and enlisted in Forrest's Cavalry a few months later to fight the Union for the rest of the war!

When the shooting was over, he went out West and punched cows, sold merchandise—"In fact, I did a little of everything to make a living." In 1902 he came to Washington. At that time there were 282 Confederate veterans, he said, now there are only three.

Mr. Waller has been brigadier general of the District Brigade, Confederate Veterans Association, ever since he moved here. In 1903 he was named custodian and bookkeeper of All Souls' Church (Unitarian) and his service has been continuous. Mrs. Waller died about six years ago. Mr. Waller lives at 2304 Fourteenth street northwest with one of his three sons.

He is built on the short, plumpish side, sports a gray mustache. He is bookkeeper not only for the congregation proper but for the 13 organizations affiliated with it.

It is Mr. Waller who makes arrangements for decorating his comrades' graves in Arlington on each Confederate Memorial Day and it is Mr. Waller who investigates all who apply for aid.

It keeps an old drummer boy busy and he loves it.

Adam Heinrich, Blacksmith, Is a Traveling Man Because He Has to Go Out and Get Business

Though the coming of the "horseless carriage" destroyed an old tradition by putting the village smithy out of business, modern blacksmiths have reverted to another old tradition to keep their business going.

Leaving the "spreading chestnut tree," Adam R. Heinrich has copied the old-time pedagogues, who went from house to house teaching the children in the days before there were schools. Horse-owners live so far apart, Heinrich explained yesterday, there can be no centrally located smithy for them to come to.

So "Rip," as Heinrich is called by old and young alike, travels about to Virginia and Maryland stables and takes the measure of horses' hoofs on large pieces of cardboard. Back at his shop near Potomac, Md., he makes up shoes for the horses he has measured each day. Lightweight jumping shoes for Fenton Fadeley's Lacquer Lady and Headrock; heavy-weighted shoes for Vernon Owen's high-stepping saddle horses.

A day or two later back he goes to the stables to nail on the shoes he has made.

Many years ago "Rip" Heinrich bought a horse for himself, Crescent, who was familiar to every horse show fan of the time, and won more touch-and-out ribbons than any other horse in the locality. When Chestnut retired, at the age of 27, Heinrich bought Good Friday, a bay now 6 years old, who won a championship in his first show last fall.

Bees' Seven-Run Rally Defeats Nats, 13 to 7

Boston College Nine Trounces Md., 14-10

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

George Preston Marshall, who is happy only when he sees his Washington Redskins in print, wandered aimlessly about Griffith Stadium yesterday at the Nats' home-coming game. He wandered on a beeline from the turnstiles to the press box in the mezzanine.

POVICH

Tugging at the collar of his ulster and stomping his feet with great to-do to stimulate the circulation in his tootsies, Mr. Marshall said slyly:

"Lads, this is football weather."

At this season of the year, Mr. Marshall is no little vexed at the absence of his Redskins from the sports pages. Baseball, he regards as a rank interloper. Of course he did not expect the gents in the press box to drop their box scores and dash off pieces anent Mr. Marshall's professional football, but Mr. Marshall is never above sowing the seed of an idea.

"Great football weather" Mr. Marshall repeated. "Won't be long now. Those he-men will be out there rocking 'em and kicking the ball around. We're all set. We'll probably have the best Redskin team we ever put on the field."

"You'll Have to Fire Me"

There was some very natural surprise registered at that statement inasmuch as the Redskins will operate sans Riley Smith and Bill Hartman, two potent backs who accepted college coaching jobs during the winter; without Roy Young, a tackle, and Jay Turner, another back, who turned their back on pro football, and without several of the young men Coach Ray Flaherty was unsuccessful in signing from college ranks. Who was Marshall counting on?

"Well, we'll always have Ernie Pinckert, ha-ha."

What he meant, of course, was that Ernie Pinckert is a landmark of Redskin teams. The blond-haired bulwark with the face of a pugilist who was never given to ducking, is, in fact, the original Redskin. He is one of the two survivors of the 1931 team collected by Marshall under the Boston banner when the Redskins first entered the National League. Marshall signed him directly after his Rose Bowl exploits of 1931. Pinckert, a well-wearing fellow despite the terrific zest he puts into his football, has vowed that he'll never quit playing. "You'll have to fire me, first," he told Marshall. His eight years in pro-football is double the normal expectancy.

When Pinckert came up with the fashionable sacro-iliac ailment last fall before the Redskins' final game of the season, it was the third time in his eight-year career as a pro that he was unable to play due to injury. At Southern California he played 58 minutes of every Trojan game for three years, twice winning All-American berths.

If he wasn't the best football player in South Cal's history he is at least the best known. They knew him not only for his terrific blocking, his three touchdowns that afternoon against Tulane in the Rose Bowl and his bashed-in nose. They knew him for his hi-jinks on the field.

Just a Baseball Fan

There was the afternoon, for example, when Southern California was playing one of its late September games, and apparently headed for a touchdown with a smooth-running attack in which Pinckert was demolishing the opposition with his blocking. As Orville Mohler, Trojan quarterback, called signals in the next huddle, Pinckert raised a protesting hand. "Wait, he said, "signals over."

After a brief bit the play went ahead as scheduled, but at the next time out, Mohler sought out Pinckert. "What's the idea calling time on me when we were in the huddle," demanded Mohler.

"Back there on the 20-yard line you mean?" said Pinckert. "Oh, well, I'm a Pirate fan and while we were in the huddle the loudspeaker was announcing the score of the Pittsburgh-Cubs game. I wanted to make sure I heard it, that was all."

There was that day, too, in late December, that Mr. Brian Bell tells me about. Southern California was playing Georgia, and in the Georgie line-up was "Catfish" Smith, famed end, who like Pinckert had been named to the All-American team the week before. Pinckert, in his blocking back role, was giving Smith a horrible time of it.

Fight for Old S. A. E.

Knocking Smith down on the first scrimmage play of the game, Pinckert helped him to his feet again. "There, there," said Pinckert, "you've got to hold up the honor of the All-American." On the next play, he threw a rolling block into Smith that knocked the Georgia end 20 feet. "Hey, stay on your feet," Pinckert yelled. "This kind of stuff brings dishonor on All-American mention."

A third and a fourth time, Pinckert banged into Smith who apparently had never encountered that kind of blocking before. Helping Smith to his feet once more, Pinckert quipped: "Listen, Smith, I've been appealing to you to stay in there for the glory of All-America. Now, dammit, try to stand up at least for the sake of Sigma Alpha Epsilon. That's my fraternity, too."

On the Line

With Considine

New York, April 12.—With much of the old-time garrulousness which caused him to be nicknamed the Sappy Warrior, Max Adelbert Baer passed breezily through town today en route to Grossinger's—the Upstate Jewish resort—where he will train for his fight against Lou Nova on June 1.

CONSIDINE

Out of a blizzard of happy-go-lucky words, punctuated with occasional dips into extreme melancholia, reporters gleaned from Baer:

1.—That Galento is a bum.

2. That he, Baer, put the word "bum" into common usage by calling Jack Sharkey that in 1931.

3.—That he will knock Nova kicking.

4.—That the Nova-Baer fight will outdraw the Louis-Galento.

5.—That he is fighting now against his wife's wishes, but that his late father gave him his blessing for the comeback.

6.—That he is betting $5,000 on himself against Nova.

7.—That Dempsey would have run Douis out of the ring and Tunney would have cut him to ribbons.

8.—That even if it means death, he is returning to his old slam-bang ring tactics.

9.—That he weighs 218

Maxie Extremely Fit

Baer passed over the 30-year line 2 months ago, but he looked a lot more fit today—before his training period—than he did when he handed his title over to James J. Braddock, nearly five years ago. His hands are like iron ingots, and he's bronzed from his sportily-shod dogs up to his tousled black hair. His Hollywoodenhead attire, featuring a polo shirt and a multi-colored neckerchief stopped traffic along the Sixth avenue boardwalk, where the natives have yet to scissor themselves out of their winter underwear.

Elaborating on his 10-point gab session, Baer said Galento was a bum because (a) he was; (b) he had to push over the Thomas boys to get to the challenger's spot; (c) he lived a wicked life and (d), (e) and (f) Louis perhaps would knock him out with three cut-opening jabs.

Max thinks Nova is a nice fellow, in fact he presented him with an expesinve pair of golf shoes just before he left California, but it seems he's not much of a fighter. Can't punch, though he'll try very hard because he, too, has a kiddie. He's not so hot, but it's going to be a good close fight. This seemed to confuse a lot of the assembled reporters.

Baer didn't mind speaking of his wife's reluctance about his fighting. "Mrs. Baer just doesn't want me to fight," he said, cocking his feet up on a corner of Mike Jacobs' desk and expertly twirling a ruler around his index finger.

"She said to me only a couple weeks ago, 'Honey, you don't have to fight. We can get along all right.' And we can. My pop felt the same way, but after I beat Farr, Pop knew I was all right. He said 'win that title back for me, Max.' And I'm going to, what do you think of that?"

A Million With Joe Louis

Nobody thought much of that, so Max went on to say that he'd bet $5,000 on himself at even money (the odds are now 13-to-10 in his favor) and that he and Louis would draw more than a million when they met in September. "Baer is the only guy Louis can draw a million with," Baer amplified. He thinks Louis looks so good today because the heavyweight field is in a deplorable condition.

Baer once startled us by whispering confidentially that God, no less, had personally taken his title from him. Today he had another somber bombshell. "Listen," he said, when the car drove up to take him to camp, "I don't give a damn what happens to me in the ring anymore. I'm going out there and swing from the heels, like I used to do when I was a fresh punk and didn't know any better. And why? Well, my wife and baby are alive, but mom and pop are on the other side. You see it doesn't matter where I am."

The congregation was visibly sobered by this thought and we were filing out silently when Max stopped moodily in front of Sol Strauss, Jacobs lawyer. "Hold out your hand," the somber Baer said.

Mr. Strauss did so, a little wonderingly. Then Baer stroked it gently, suddenly crouched imperceptively and hit Sol's tender paw with a blistering left hook.

Mr. Strauss dropped his judicial dignity and hollered, "Ow!" wrung his numb hand, turned on Max and chased him around the office in a laughing, howling bit of sweaty horseplay.

Ten Errors Lead Terps To Defeat

Old Liners' 8-Run Rally in 8th Fails To Overcome Huge Lead; Burns Stars

By Jack Munhall.

Completely at home in the blustery New England weather, Boston College combined 10 Maryland errors with timely hitting yesterday to hand the Terps their second straight defeat, winning, 14-10, in a five-inning game called because of cold and high winds.

Maryland almost succeeded in escaping the loss in the final inning but its last-ditch rally fell short—four runs short of tying the count. Behind 14-2 the battling Old Liners fashioned an eight-run scoring outburst from five hits, two walks, a hit batsman, and two potent homers.

It was something of a surprise to the few fans who were still braving the subfreezing weather, and also to the Eagles, the way Maryland fought back, for in the first four innings a smoothly-working Eagle righthander, Sigmund Somy, allowed only three hits.

Somy retired after the fourth, with an apparently prohibitive lead, and was relieved by a sophomore, Tom Bradley, who proved a great relief to Maryland. As soon as the new pitcher took the mound things began to happen in rapid and climatic succession.

The first thing that happened was a screaming home run authored by Hugh Keller, first Maryland batter. This done, the Terps really warmed to their task, and on a walk to Eddie Johnson, a single by Adam Bengoechea and a hit batsman (Joe Crisafulli), they loaded the bases.

Burns Drives in Four Runs

It took Mr. Bradley practically no time at all to saturate the sacks and it took Maryland's Bob Burns nothing flat to empty 'em. He did it with his little bat. He plastered one of Bradley's fast ones smack dab on the nose and circled the bases behind his three mates. Still not convinced it wasn't his day, Bradley lingered on the scene long enough to give a walk to Cox, third Maryland pitcher used in the game, and a single to Shorty Chumbris, sandwiched between the second out, before he was thumbed to the showers.

A gent named Muller came in to pitch for Boston College then and, although he threatened to prolong the agony by issuing an infield single to Knepley and another single to Keller, which drove in 2 runs, he finally managed the final out.

Maryland's opening run was made in the second, when Fritz Maizel singled to drive home Bengoechea, who had walked. Its second tally was accomplished very easily. Johnson knocked a home run in the third.

Charlie Weidinger, who worked the first three innings and did rather well in view of wretched support, was charged with the loss.

Bartell Leaves Chicago Hospital

Chicago, April 12 (AP).—Dick Bartell, $24,000 a year Chicago Cubs' shortstop, today left Masonic Hospital after eight days of treatment and rest for his left ankle. Bartell said the ankle felt stronger than at any time since he injured it March 12 and expected to be in uniform when the Cubs open their spring city series against the White Sox Friday.

Dr. John F. Davis, team physician, said Augie Galan, the Cub outfielder whose ailing knee resulted in his being sent home from the Cub training tour, will remain in the hospital for an indefinite period.

Washington's Flock of Cubans Dismayed by First 'Winter'

Ortiz Puts on First Overcoat, Shivers Forlornly in 40-Mile Gale

By Al Hailey.

The home-coming Washington Nationals yesterday received a severe shock in the form of a 40-mile gale howling across the Griffith Stadium tundras and sweeping the last remnant of Florida's Spanish moss from their sun-bleached locks.

Happy in the thought of palm trees and balmy breezes, the Nats returned to find their home smelling of fresh paint and gleaming with new appurtenances to please the eye and fill the needs of the patrons expected to turn out Monday when President Roosevelt will toss out the first ball to open officially the 1939 season.

As the Nats took the field yesterday to warm up for their exhibition contest with the Bees of Boston, a swirling cloud of gravel riding on the gale drove the less hardy ones back to the dugouts, where stood two forlorn young men growing sadder by the minute.

These young men were Washington's two newest acquisitions, Roberto Ortez, late of Cuba's cane fields, and Alex Alexandra, fresh from Venezuela, and they were unhappy because it was the first time either had worn an overcoat or had seen anything like what was going on in the way of weather at that moment. Indeed, it has not been long since Ortez had donned his first pair of shoes.

"Why are you not out there in uniform pitching them over," Ortez was asked.

Apparently this shook him, for he paled and drew deeper into the collar of his first overcoat.

"I peetch already out zere in ze practical," he moaned. "Ees plenty cold, so I come in, ees that not so, Alex." he demanded, turning to Alex, also nestling into his first overcoat.

"Oh, oh, oh," groaned Alex, and then lapsed into a more eloquent flow of Spanish. Four young school girls seeking autographs loked on in amazed delight as Alex and Roberto complained about the weather in Spanish and then descended upon the two in a whirl of giggles. This seemed to please the youngsters, who quickly obliged.

The cold weather, however, did not dampen spirits of the Boston Bees. They took over homeplate at the outset to gather around their new possession, big Al Simmons, who, ironically enough, was being awarded a watch as "Washington's most valuable player of 1938."

In the stands, 1,200 fans who braved the icy winds stamped their feet to keep warm and muttered to themselves as the wind played havoc with the ball out on the Michigan is here for a three-game visit. The Wolverines move over to College Park for contests with Maryland tomorrow and Saturday.

Bruins Predict They'll Win Hockey Title

Boston, 2-1 Favorites To Win Stanley Cup, Leads Series, 2 to 1

By the United Press.

Toronto, Ont., April 12.—Boston Bruin players were unanimous tonight in predicting that they will beat the Toronto Maple Leafs in their next two National Hockey League play-off games and thereby win the Stanley Cup.

The Bruins, 2-1 favorites to take the trophy, can wind up the best-of-seven final by beating the Leafs on Toronto ice tomorrow night and then repeating the trick at Boston on Sunday.

Last night's 3-1 victory over the Leafs gave Boston and advantage of two games to one in the play-off series. Manager Art Ross, of the Bruins, said he believes his men are back in stride and "they should finish this business in a hurry."

If the Bruins come through as expected, it will mark their first play-off series victory over Toronto.

Durocher Drives in Five Runs; DiMaggio, Camilli Hit Homers

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., April 12.—While Dolph Camilli and Joe DiMaggio were matching home runs for the entertainment of 6,000 spectators, the shorter range gunning of Manager Leo Durocher today gave the Brooklyn Dodgers their third straight victory over the New York Yankees, 9 to 7.

Durocher had two doubles in four trips to the plate and batted in five runs.

The Dodgers teed off for five runs in the first inning off Johnny Murphy, a great relief pitcher who met the same rebuff accorded other men who have tried a different trade, and collected another in the third and three more in the fifth before Manager Joe McCarthy sent in help.

The Yankees cannonaded Bill Crouch's curves for four runs in the first three innings and outhit the Dodgers, 13 to 11, but were checked by Hugh Casey until outdistanced.

Red Sox Outslug Cincinnati, 17-14

Roanoke, Va., April 12 (U.P.).—Nine homers soared over the fences and into the stands here today as the Boston Red Sox came from behind and slugged out a 17-14 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Cincinnati batsmen accounted for six of the homers. Wally Berger hitting two, and Ival Goodman, Ernie Lombardi, Stan Bordagaray and Nolen Richardson, one each.

Jim Tabor, Ted Williams and John Peacock slammed the Red Sox four-baggers, Peacock's coming in the eighth with the bases loaded to climax a seven-run game-winning rally by the Sox.

Monteagudo, Wasdell Boot Game Away

Wild Throw to Third In 8th Inning Aids Boston Triumph; Rene Helps Too

By Shirley Povich.

In windy weather that smacked of football, the Boston Bees won the Nats homecoming game yesterday by the appropriate score of 13 to 7. The extra points were kicked in by Sammy Wasdell and Rene Monteagudo.

It was a 6-to-6 tie until Wasdell and Monteagudo booted the games into possession of the Bees before the remnants of the 500 chilled spectators still in the park. The game collapsed as a contest in the eighth inning when, with the help of Wasdell's wild throw to third base, the Bees scored four runs. And then, in the ninth, Monteagudo pitched three more runs at the Bees.

Back in the fifth inin, with a rally comprised of four bases on balls, a Boston error, a hit batsman and a lone single, the Nats came up with four runs to drive Bill Posedel out of the box, but little Monteagudo, who took up the pitching thereafter, had little success.

Bees Chase Ken Chase

He had no worse success, however, than Ken Chase, who had started the proceedings for the Nats, and left the game in the third inning with the Bees in possession of a 6-1 lead. The only Washington pitcher who did have any success was Pete Appleton who pitched the mid-three innings and held the Bees scoreless with two hits.

After escaping the seventh inning without damage, Monteagudo stirred up some trouble for himself in the eighth by walking Fletcher and pitching a single to Miller. It appeared that he might escape damage also, but Wasdell, who picked up Lopez's bunt, heaved it too generally in the direction of third base in an attempt for a force play on Fletcher. The ball was wide of Buddy Lewis' reach and when it rolled against the leftfield stands, Fletcher scored, Miller scored, and Lopez reached scoring position at third base.

Hero and Goat

In the ninth, Monteagudo could blame none of his colleagues. He threw a two-bagger to Miller and singles to Lopez, Cooney and Hassett to surrender three more runs.

Wasdell, when he wasn't making his wild pitch to third base, was something of a hero for the Nats. He shook off his batting slump to the extent of pounding out a single and double and beating out a bunt in four times at bat, making three of the Nats' 11 hits.

Ken Chase helped the Bees to a 2-0 lead in the first inning by walking Cooney and pitching singles to Garms and Al Simmons, and in the third he lost both his control and effectiveness. He walked two batters and pitched a destructive single to Cuccinello with the bases full. The Bees thus upped their lead to 6-1.

The Nats, mainly Case and Lewis, had belted Posedel for a run in the first inning, and in the fourth they got another when Wasdell doubled to left and Jake Early singled to center. In the fifth, Posedel couldn't get anybody out. The first man out in the inning was Posedel. Milt Shoffner relieved him when with the bases full, he hit Travis on the foot to force over run. The bases were full, incidentally, because Hassett dropped Estallela's wind-blown fly, and Posedel walked Wright and Myer.

Shofner couldn't get the ball over either, and forced in the scond run of the inning. Then Jake Early singled to left and the Nats had a 6-6 tie. The Bees won the rest of the game.

Reiser, Dodger Ace Hit by Batted Ball

$2,585 Purse Winner Pays Backers $17.60; Double Pays $122.90 At St. Georges Oval

By Walter Haight,
a Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 12.—Running as if he were a rabbit that had jumped over the fence at the head of the stretch and found himself in a horse race, Rumba Gus streaked through his field into the thirteenth renewal of the $2,500 Kindergarten Stakes. Carrying the yellow, silver and red of Gustav Ring, Washington and Baltimore builder, Rumba Gus finished three parts of a length in advance of Jouett Shouse's Arden Lass, with T. J. Hill's Nosy judged third in a photo finish.

Rumba Gus, trained for his turf career at this track, had all the appearances of a well-beaten animal with only three-eighths of a mile left to go, but the game little son of Saxon felt the urge of Jockey Glenn Smith and from somewhere developed a rush. Five horses in front of him formed a "stop Rumba Gus" bloc, but to no avail. He bounded over the finish line to be opening a gap at the finish.

$17.60 Mutuel Price

In addition to gathering $2,585 in purse money for Owner Ring, the Saxon colt was responsible for the displaying of a $17.60 mutuel.

When it is considered that the field was bucking a gale for more than half of the 4 furlongs, the time of 0:49 3-5 was creditable.

Starter Jim Milton sent the field of nine away in good order and Pimlico Queen jumped into a lead that had all the earmarks of victory. She opened a three-length lead followed by Halcyon Boy and Rancho's Girl. The leader, owned by Frank Garrett, hot-stepped along under the urging of Jockey Mannie Berg. Entering the stretch, Rumba Gus had only three horses beaten and one of those was Praetor being pulled up.

In midstretch Pimlico Queen still held a good margin, but suddenly began running in one spot. The field made a dive at her and most prominent in the pack was Rumba Gus. He was to all purposes flying. Arden Lass and Nosy did some closing of their own, but nothing that could keep Rumba Gus from the all important first money.

Double Pays $122.90

The daily double paid $122.90 to 128 lucky ticket holders.

Claude Feltner's Tuleyries Lin, unable to get out of his own way in his most recent start and far back in only slightly better company, ran like a scared rabbit to win the first race by four lengths. Apprentice G. Martin just sat still on the Dunlin filly and she bounded along without a challenger. Balcony was second and Ruth Lerner, the last named the favorite, was third in the field of nine going six furlongs. The time was a terrible 1:15 1-5.

Holton, a son of Osculator, came out of the pack to win the second race under handling of Apprentice A. Snider. In the colors of the Cisco Stable, Holton completed the six furlongs a length in advance of Ann Mowlee. Third money went to Nine-O'Two, which appeared at 9 to 2 odds as the field arrived at the post. Flag Etta, with Johnny Oros in the saddle, set the early pace and stopped badly in the stretch. Holton paid $18.90.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TULEYRIES LIN, $14.40, $7.20, $4.20; BALCONY, $4.10, $2.80; RUTH LERNER, $2.90.

TULEYRIES LIN, showing a surprising form reversal, took command at once, drew out and was not threatened at any stage while winning with speed in reserve. BALCONY was hard ridden from start and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. RUTH LLERNER went evenly. MISS TROY swerved directly after start and could not improve position after opening furlong.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:04½. Off 3:06. Winner, Cisco Stable's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOLTON, $18.90, $10.10, $6.90; ANN MOWLEE, $7.60, $4.90; NINE-O-TWO, $4.40.

HOLTON, steadied along while within striking distance of leaders, rallied when placed to drive in early stretch and wore down ANN MOWLEE to be opening a gap at the end. ANN MOWLEE was shuffled back directly after start, moved up gradually to take command in midstretch and closed gamely, but could not resist winner. NINE-O-TWO, off slowly, finished fast on outside. WAR GRAND raced on inside and failed to threaten

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA FLIGHT, $8.20, $4.10, $2.70; FOREIGN LEGION, $4.20, $2.60; SPARTAN LADY, $2.50.

JUSTA FLIGHT, allowed to settle into stride, improved position gradually on outside to stretch, responded gamely when shaken up and wore down FOREIGN LEGION to be up in concluding stride. FOREIGN LEGION worked way to contention between horses, took command under pressure inside sixteenth pole and barely failed to last. SPARTAN LADY set good pace, but weakened suddenly in final eighth. NANCY MAE was listlessly handled and closed on own courage.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000 added. The Blenheim Handicap; Class C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02½. Off 4:03. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAGLIACCI, $9.20, $4.90, $3.60; SUN EGRET (entry), $3.80, $2.70; OCEAN ROLL, $4.50.

PAGLIACCI, not hurried while within striking distance along backstretch, was put to pressure in early stretch and responded to wear down SUN EGRET to win going away. SUN EGRET raced on outside, came around horses to take command in midstretch, but could not resist winner while under pressure. OCEAN ROLL was closest to pace of DRUDGERY for three furlongs, dropped back and went evenly thereafter under intermittent punishment. GERALD closed full of run and appears ready for route.

FIFTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Bowie Kindergarten. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:36. Winner, G. Ring's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUMBA GUS, $17.60, $5.40, $3.30; ARDEN LASS (entry), $2.90, $2.30; NOSY (entry), $2.30.

RUMBA GUS, steadied along when unable to find racing room in opening stages, came between horses with bold rush in stretch and won going away under strong handling. ARDEN LASS raced within striking distance from break, rallied to drive and closed gamely. NOSY was shuffled back at start, raced wide at stretch turn and closed with good energy. HALCYON BOY was closest to pace to stretch and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates, for all but Quotum. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:04. Winner, B. F. Christmas' ch. g. (4), by Chance Shot—Penny Pan. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 2:00 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAUERMAN, $6.30, $4.50, $3.80; COUNTER PASS, $7.20, $4.90; PUDDLES, $8.10.

LAUERMAN, steadied along with pace of MINNA, took lead when asked and shook off latter, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of COUNTER PASS. The latter was rated on outside to stretch, responded when shaken up and was catching the winner at end. PUDDLES was strongly handled from start and closed gamely. LUCRE LUDE was taken up when in close quarters approaching backstretch and weakened when placed to pressure. QUOTUM was off poorly and tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:31½. Off 5:34. Winner, Mrs. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRETTYLASS, $9.70, $5.70, $3.70; POPO, $7.30, $3.90; HAPPY ROAD, $2.90.

PRETTYLASS, rated while racing forwardly from start, alternated in setting and pressing pace after opening quarter and closed gamely under drive to hold away at end. POPO was keen factor from break and tired slightly at finish. HAPPY ROAD set early pace, dropped out of it and came with rush in closing stages.

At The Post

Dear Al:

Despite the fact that horses named for movie stars seem to have two strikes on them before they go to the post, the movies and racing have been closely associated. Some of the best pictures of recent years have been based on racing and situations and characters of the turf. The Washington and Baltimore theaters hook up with Bowie today in presenting the Wuthering Heights Purse, feature race on the Thursday program. The race is named for the picture that will appear at the Loew's Palace Theater starting April 21 (plug). Seven horses have been named for the 6-furlong sprint. Modern Age and Eye High have been winners at the meeting. Others to face the starter are Star Struck, M'Appari, Dorothy Pomp, Arboreal and Blacky Bee. Fighting Fox has been assigned top weight of 122 pounds for the Harford Handicap, $5,000 added feature of Saturday's opening day program at Havre de Grace. There is little or no chance that Fighting Fox will start. It appears that Conquer with 121 pounds will be the top weight of the horses going to the post. Jay Jay, Howard Bruce's speedster, gets in with 120, the same as Airflame. Others in the high bracket are Stormscud, 118; Thanksgiving, Wise Prince, Preeminent, 117; Rye Beach, Sun Egret, 116, and Old Rosebush, 114. Morestep is the lightest with 97 pounds. Macmac and Vedalia came out of their recent races in lame condition and have been banned as starters until the track vet gives his o.k. Don Meade may make his first Maryland appearance in colors since his suspension at Havre de Grace. The "comeback kid" is likely to have the leg up on Volitant in the Chesapeake Stakes. Volitant is owned by the Saratoga Stables, the property of George Bull, of the Jockey Club. Thanks for those letters about the big day for the marvel ratings Tuesday. Yes, those were good odds on Good Odds.

BILL.

First race—Waugh Pop took the overland route but put up a strong finish to get third money last Saturday. He was a consistent winner at Fair Grounds and is nicely placed here with Oros riding. Match Point should go well on a fast track and can better a poor effort last outing. Kermay might run away and hide from this kind but is unsound.

Second race—Eva R. whipped this bunch a week ago but could do no better than third last outing. She has been an honest mare and is on the edge for her best efforts. Ouragan was an in and outer in Canada last summer but can win this if fit. Apprehend is in smart hands and due to uncork one of his good races.

Third race—Hugood couldn't threaten with maidens Friday but previous races were fair. Brother Higher makes his first start but has good breeding. Satin Rolls for the show. Rumba Gus is ineligible.

Fourth race—Goster was unbeatable at this claiming level at New Orleans but failed to threaten in his only start here. He drops down today to meet a field of cheap platers and should win. James Pal won in this company opening day and may make most of the contention. Goldman deadheated with Idle Elf in his last and should go well.

Fifth race—Dorothy Pomp won two heats last fall and needed her race behind Short Cake last week. This filly likes this track, is fit, and will be hard to beat. Eye High whipped a shifty field of better grade platers in muddy going earlier in the meeting and figures to offer most of the contention. Modern Age won his last going a route; is sprinting today.

Sixth race—Geodesian was installed a hot favorite when second to Pascua at this distance recently and the latter went on to win over Darby Du. Only has to run his race to win this. Gimpey closed well behind the top horse in that heat and is ready to make it a horse race all the way. Bold Fay has been sprinting. Chance if she lasts.

Seventh race—Lady Democrat won eased up in a similar field Saturday, has shown great improvement in recent races and should make it two in a row with this cheap competition today. Brandon Prince is in top form, having won his last heat but is strictly an off-track horse. Squabble won earlier in the meeting and has an outside chance.

Best bet—LADY DEMOCRAT.

Unemployment Tax Lightened On Ky. Tracks

Frankfort, Ky., April 12 (AP).—The Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission today classified horse racing as a seasonal industry and relieved the four tracks in the State from paying full unemployment insurance taxes.

The action, taken on petition of Maurice L. Galvin, of Covington, secretary-treasurer of Churchill Downs-Latonia, Inc., exempts the tracks from paying taxes in behalf of employes except for their season of employment.

Galvin told the commission only approximately one-quarter of track employes work the year around.

Farr Favored Over Red Burman

London, April 12 (AP).—Tommy Farr, back home and hungry again, was the 4-to-5 favorite to beat America's Red Burman in their 12-round fight at Harringay tomorrow night.

The experts have decided Tommy will win because, as they explain, Burman's New York victory over the Welshman was merely due to peculiarities of the American ring. Burman outpointed Farr in a closely fought 10-rounder in Madison Square Garden last January.

A crowd of 30,000 is expected to pay around $50,000 to see Farr's comeback in the English ring after losing all of his five starts in the United States.

Gov't. Table Tennis Play Carded Tonight

The Government employes will hold their third annual table tennis championships tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock at 1306 E street northwest. The competition will include men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles.

Late entries should be telephoned to Eddie Yap at Metropolitan 8088.

Chevy Chase in Action

Washington Women Golfers Take Lead in Team Matches

Manor Scores Easily Over Woodmont

Columbia Extends Indian Spring's Defending Champs; Army-Navy Wins

By Merrill W. Whittlesey.

Washington's first team entry in the Women's District Golf Association team matches scored an 11-to-1 victory over Argyle's inaugural entry in the annual play to take the lead as 80 first-team members, from 10 clubs, braved a miniature gale yesterday at Beaver Dam to start the season's play.

Second and third team engagements at Washington Golf and Country Club found Manor scoring a clean sweep over Indian Spring to lead the seven second teams with 9 points, while Army and Navy's third team entry blanked Columbia to pace the four-team race.

The battle for the first team championship, that is expected to create the most interest in years due to every member club but Kenwood battling for the title, found Washington, Chevy Chase and Manor scoring expected one-sided triumphs, with the feature matches in the other two battles.

Forced to Substitute

Indian Spring, defending champion and heavy favorite to repeat, was held to a 7-to-5 margin over Columbia's line-up, that counted all its points in the last two foursomes. Mrs. Alma von Steiner and Mrs. C. P. Medley, of the favorites, lost 2½ of 3 points to Mrs. Norman Frost and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer, while Mrs. A. C. Minnix and Mrs. R. A. Lacey, Columbia, won 2½ over Mrs. J. W. Bullock and H. Sharpe. Mrs. Lacey, association president, was to play with the second team, but was forced to substitute at the last minute, and was an important factor in the triumph.

Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional's threat to the local titles this year, who decided to play with the team on Monday, paired with former club champion, Mrs. J. O. Rhyne to upset Mrs. David Clarke, former Middle Atlantic titleholder, and Mrs. George Hussey, all three points. It was Congressional's lone threat in the matches, however.

3-Point Victories

Navy Nine Defeats Yale In Gale, 11-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 12.—Navy ball players shook the ice out of their joints this afternoon and won from Yale, 11 to 5. Jerry Bruckel, who pitched the winning game against Harvard Saturday, again went the route and allowed only three hits, which, however, included a double and a homer by McClellan. The home run, a drive to right in the ninth inning, was the first of the local season.

The game was played in a strong wind which rose at times to the intensity of a near-gale. The temperature was below 40 degrees. Lem Cooke, Navy captain, was brilliant at third, taking eight chances without a flaw.

Navy started early when Thompson, the first man up, tripled to left and McGuinness walked. Thompson scored on Cooke's single and McGuinness scored when Powell was safe on Besse's error. Yale scored in the third, when Krech singled, went to third when Mendoza and Collins were passed. He went home when Anderson made a bad throw to second.

Navy strengthened its lead in the fourth. Powell was safe on Wood's error, Wooding was passed, and Bruckel scored both with a single to right.

Sigrepi Sets New Season Pin Mark

Led by Frank Sigrepi, who established a season record for the Civic Club League with a set of 405 and rolled a high game of 153, Lido swept three games from S. S. Lions to tie Kiwanis No. 1 for first place.

Lido had high team game, 593, and high team set, 1,744, a season record.

Bankers League

Hamilton whitewashed City Bank team to replace the losers in first place by one game. City Bank's drop climaxed four weeks of faltering during which it dissipated a seven-game lead.

Al Wright, of American Security No. 1, and Booth, of Riggs tied for high individual game, 141; Wright had high individual set, 392; Hamilton and W. B. Hibbs & Co. tied for high team game, 578, and Hibbs & Co. had high team set, 1,659.

Temple Minor League

Bowlers of the Frank's Tavern team last night finished on top in the Temple Minor League at closing contests in the Northeast Temple, with 66 wins and 24 losses. The champions defeated the Boveglio Club twice last night, cinching first place.

Runners-up were Sidwell's Senators. Standard Brand and Camden Tavern, in that order. Joe Gardner, of Warwick's, ran up the highest score of the evening, with a 334, and the second highest of the season, 161. Warwick's bowlers won high score for the evening, with 607, and also took the three-game set, with 1,667.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

As a cash customer of the movies, who always takes the Hollywood cinema columnists and the fan magazines as gospel truth, we were greatly surprised by a letter to the New York Times recently from Frank Capra, one of the big three of the movie directors.

RUNYON

Now we always had an idea that a movie director had all the say in the making of a picture. We thought he was the judge and jury, and maybe the district attorney, too. We thought that in the making of a picture the director sat back and told everybody where to head in, but Mr. Capra says this is not so.

Mr. Capra says there are only half a dozen directors in Hollywood who are allowed to shoot as they please and who have any supervision over the editing of their pictures. He says that 80 per cent of the directors today shoot scenes exactly as they are told to shoot them without any changes whatever, and that 90 per cent of the directors have no voice in the story or in the editing.

Struggle in Vain

It appears from Mr. Capra's letter that the directors have been struggling against this situation for several years, asking more time for preparation before starting a picture, and a small voice in supervising just the first rough cut of the picture, but that they are not getting a whole lot of encouragement.

He thinks the mass production is largely to blame and he also is inclined to censure directors who are content to sit back and enjoy fat salaries and forget the responsibilities they have toward the medium they are in. Away down toward the end of his letter he says about six producers today pass upon 90 per cent of the scripts and edit 90 per cent of the pictures.

Mr. Capra's letter was read at the last meeting of the V. F. C. C., (vengeance for cash customers) and the secretary was requested to write him and get the names of these six producers. If it develops that they were in any manner responsible for the scripts of certain recent pictures filed against the cash customers, their names will be brought up at the next session and booed for three minutes each.

Misinformed

All of the members of the V. F. C. C. have been under the impression that the directors were to blame for the cinematic misfeasances, and indeed at the time of the reading of Mr. Capra's letter, the names of no less than four directors had already been presented to the meeting for booing and one of them was to get six minutes, at that.

On hearing Mr. Capra's letter, a sister member of the V. F. C. C. moved that instead a resolution of sympathy for the cash customers be spread on the minutes, but this motion was tabled until it can be learned if any of the directors were as much as in the neighborhood of the making of some of those pictures, a proximity that would deprive them of any commiseration.

The secretary was also instructed to ask Mr. Capra who is responsible for some of the cinema actors acting the way they do. The V. F. C. C. feels that somebody must be responsible for this. It does not seem to the organization that those actors just walk out in front of the camera and start acting the way they do of their own volition. If the names of the producers can be ascertained and the responsibility for those actor fixed, the V. F. C. C. will feel that it is getting somewhere.

Directors Fortunate

The directors of Hollywood were fortunate as far as the V. F. C. C., is concerned in having a man of Mr. Capra's impeccability go to bat for them, though it must be admitted that not all the members were finally convinced by his epistle. For no less than four recent pictures, they want a stronger bill of health than a mere letter before absolving the directors.

These skeptical members insisted that Mr. Campra be asked if the directors of the pictures at issue were sober and conscious when the pictures were being made, but this suggestion was finally voted down. The majority felt that an answer might tend to incriminate some of the directors.

The V. F. C. C. has been growing by leaps and bounds since its' organization a few months ago. The original membership had to be greatly reduced, however, through a most drastic purge when it was discovered that many cash customers who had enlisted were of violent and even sanguinary disposition. It was their idea that the V. F. C. C. should devote itself to strong reprisals, rather than to mere vocal manifestations.

For instance, there was a member who wanted to send secret delegates to Hollywood to plant bombs under any director who got on the V. F. C. C. green list which corresponds to some organizations' black list. This member was heaved out as a bolshevicky, along with another who advocated sending the directors Miguel Finnolas, though the meeting toyed with his idea, at that.

One thing the V. F. C. C. will not stand for and that is violence. Only last week, a number of excitable members were admonished for wanting to throw bad eggs at a picture, the executive committee ruling that bad eggs were too good for the picture.

A. U. 'Profs' Teach Students How to Play Softball, 26-10

Students of American University, eager to display some form of superiority over their professors, were dealt a humiliating defeat yesterday by faculty sluggers in a slambang softball game staged in observance of the university's traditional celebration of Arbor Day.

Freshmen and seniors alike swarmed over the school's diamond, gloating inwardly at the thought of humbling the professors. The students, however, were forced to call out reserve power, including a pretty lass, to play second base, but the faculty carried through to a 26-to-10 victory.

The students appeared to display more interest in their second baseman than in the game, faculty members pointed out. The co-ed conscripted for the keystone sack was Miss Ruth Bauersfield. Her batting average was two hits for two trips to the plate.

Six pitchers were called into service by the harried students, while the faculty sent one over the whole route. After the first inning, scoreboard keepers refused to keep score by innings, pointing out this would entail too much toil. At the end of the game, figures revealed 34 hits and 5 errors for the faculty and 11 hits and 6 errors for the students.

Ryan, Hader Meet Tonight In Grudge Bout

Ryan Out to Avenge Last Week's 'Defeat;' Berger Will Referee

RYAN

The return match will settle a "grudge" between Hader and Ryan and remove doubts over last week's match, given to Hader in a doubtful decision which resulted in Promoter Joe Turner's withholding the $190 purse. The two groan artists will meet on a 75-25 basis with the $190 thrown in.

Casey Berger, former Scranton coal miner, will referee in place of Bennah Bortnick, who, as the third man in the ring last week was knocked out. George Calza will meet Tom Mahoney in one of the supporting bouts, and in the semi-windup, George Pencheff, Australian flash, will meet Alonzo Woods; Dropkick Murphy will meet Ace Gordon, and Dutch (Devil) Schultz will meet Ernie Powers. The card opens at 8:30 p. m.

In last week's match, Ryan was said to have pinned Hader while Referee Bortnick was being revived. Hader, Turner's propaganda source said, reached up and patted Ryan on the back. Ryan, taking the pat for the referee's signal of victory, stood up, whereupon Hader launched a surprise attack and Pinned Rosy Red just as Bortnick came around.

Dollins Advances In Mason-Dixon

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 12 (AP).—Al Dollins, Covington, Va., medalist, marched along in a high wind today to a quick 6-4 victory over amateur Golfer Bob Harries in the nineteenth Mason and Dixon tourney.

Dollins, qualifying yesterday with a one over par 71, took the measure of the Greenbrier Military Academy athletic coach as the wind played tricks on other tournament players. Dollins advanced into the tournament semifinals and ruled as favorite to take the championship won in 1938 by Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk.

Frederick Angler Creels 2-Pound Trout

Frederick, Md., April 12.—Largest trout reported caught in Frederick County this season was hooked yesterday by Chester L. Grove, jr., this city, who creeled a brown that measured 16 inches and weighed 2 pounds. Grove, using a worm as bait, had some difficulty landing the trout on his light 4-ounce rod. Best previous catch reported was a 14-inch brown hooked by Sergt. James E. Solt, of the Frederick police force, on opening day of the season. Both fish were caught in Fishing Creek.

Central Nine Drills

The Central High School baseball team will practice at 10 o'clock this morning. All candidates are urged to report at the stadium.

Brookwood A. C. Wins

Powell to Practice

Blue Jays Beaten

The T Street Tigers yesterday downed the Blue Jays in an insect game on the Langley Junior High School diamond, 24-2. The Tigers were paced by the hitting of Hymie Kendill, who knocked two home runs.

Johns Hopkins Nine Trounces Wilson by 17-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, April 12.—Johns Hopkins University opened its baseball season and a new diamond with a blustery 17-to-1 victory over Wilson Teachers, of Washington, at Homewood today. The new field was raked by a high cold wind that made the athletes glad to limit their activities to seven innings.

Wilson's obvious lack of practice made it no contest from the first inning, for five errors by the Capital Teachers helped the Jays score four runs. By the fourth inning, Hopkins led, 17 to 0, and the home team did not add anything to its total in the next two turns at bat.

The only ragged session afield for the Jays came in the final frame, when Wilson was handed a complimantry run through three errors.

Callahan, Salvia, Alperstein and Schwartzman made the most of the Jays' 11 hits. Salvia hit a home run ball in the fourth inning, but was held to three bases when he missed tagging the hot corner and had to retrace his steps.

John Donohue, freshman pitcher, worked the first five innings for Hopkins. He allowed only two hits. One was a scratch bounder in front of the plate, and the other a hopper that cut just inside the first base bag. He fanned seven, striking out the side in the third, and yielded only three walks.

Cavalier Nine Beats Michigan

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 12.—Virginia's nine nosed out Michigan here today, 2 to 1, to register its fourth successive victory of the season. It was the first defeat sustained by the Wolverines on their Southern invasion. The contest, played on a gale-swept diamond, proved a pitchers' duel between Jack Barry, Michigan's giant right-hander, and Frank Nichols, of Virginia. Each yielded four hits.

Outdoor Match Bait For Arena Bout Winner

Mountain State Loop Down to Six Teams

Charleston, W. Va., April 12 (AP).—Any prospects for an eight-club Mountain State baseball circuit went aglimmering tonight with an announcement that this year only six outfits will go to bat.

Beckley and Roanoke-Salem, said League President Ray Ryan, of Bluefield, are "definitely" out.

on Fishing

The mountain fishing season in western North Carolina opening April 15 will attract anglers from every part of the Atlantic coastal area, and will continue through vacation days until September 1. The choice month, however, is June. Not especially because the fish seem to be biting better, but for the reason it is the best of all the outdoor months, and every fishing stream in the State will be open after June 10, with an abundant supply of stocked and native fish.

ACKERMAN

In Macon County, one of the wealthiest in water, trout are to be found in the Nantahalia, Little Tennessee and Cullasaja Rivers. In addition there are fighting muskies in the Little Tennessee. Sprinkled with resorts, all of them open by June 1, many of them earlier, lodgings are also to be obtained at Highlands, Franklin and Rainbow Springs.

Shooting Creek and Lake Carroll in Clay County are smallmouth black bass waters. There are cabins available on the shores of the latter. Trout thrive in the waters of Logans, Black Branches, Kinsley, Forest and Beach Creek. Anglers may stay at Haysville, Black Gap and Beach Spring.

Fishing Plentiful

In Cherokee County, in the extreme southwestern corner of North Carolina, are Telico, Hiawassee, Natla and Hanging Dog Creeks. Each and every one swell fishing for both bass and trout. Stay at the little town of Murphy.

Northward lies the rugged mountain county of Graham, with trout in Snowbird, West Buffalo and Deep Creeks. Lake Santeelah is noted black bass water; cabins may be had on the shore of this lake, or stay at Robbinsville. In adjacent Swain County, anglers stay at the excellent hotel in Bryson, and fish Hazel and Norland Creeks for trout, and bass and trout in the Lufty River and Cheoah Lake. This is close to the muskalunge fishing in the Little Tennessee River.

Close also are the numerous waters of the Great Smokies National Park. Accomodations may be had at Cherokee in the Qualla Indian Reservation, or at Waynesville.

Many waters in this section are under the jurisdiction of National Park Service. Others under the conservation department, and numbers of lakes and streams privately stocked and requiring daily fees to fish. This type of stream fishing is to be recommended for the creels are usually full with no drain on the water, which is heavily stocked each year.

Various Dates

In the Pisgah Forest, whose three divisions are around Asheville, there are various dates for angling in certain stocked streams. Information can be had from the Forest Supervisor, Arcade Building, Ashville, or in writing, address him P. O. Box 40.

The State maintains many game refuges in this area, where good fishing is assured by the continuous planting. However, these streams are open only for short periods. Play safe by getting the open dates from Bill Sharp, Department of Conservation and Development, Raleigh, N. C.

In the Pisgah Forest region trout dominate in Cataloochee Creek, the Pigeon River, and Lakes Logan and Junaluska. Flady Fork of the French Broad River, is in Transylvania, best watered of the counties in the Forest area, is real trout water. In it muskelunge are found too, and trout in the Horse Pasture. Lake Fairfield is the nearest stopping place for the trout fishing in White Water river, and Toxaway, a resort open only in the summer, the best place to stay to fish for bass and trout in the Toxaway River and Lake Sapphire.

Virginia School Boy Praised For No-Hitter

Melvin Gallahan, 17, Allows Only 28 Men To Face Him; Fans 20

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 12.—Melvin Gallahan, 17-year-old rookie of the Falmouth High School baseball team, was hailed as a hero today by his schoolmates, for yesterday he did about everything that could be asked of a pitcher.

On the slab against King George High, he turned in a remarkable no-hit, no-run performance. Only 28 men faced him; 20 of them struck out. He didn't issue a base on balls or make an error. His only mistake came in the fourth when he hit a man with one of his wicked curves.

3d Squadron Beats Revenue Rifle Team

Takes Championship Of Gallery League by 1,180-1,134 Victory

Clinching its lead over seven other teams firing in the Washington Gallery Rifle League, the four-man rifle team of the Third Scouting Squadron, Marine Reserves, last night defeated the Internal Revenue squad, 1,180-1,134, on the range of the National Rifle Association, 10 G street northeast.

The Marine team took the Gallery League Trophy, awarded by the association, sponsor of the meet, and accounted for three out of four prizes awarded for highest individual scorers.

Georgetown University's freshman rifle team finished in second place with five wins and two losses.

Standards Win, Force Playoff In Gov't. Loop

Bureau of Standards defeated the Library of Congress basketball team, 21-16, at the Y. M. C. A. last night to force the two teams into a play-off next week for the Government League championship.

Heur and Bausch each scored 8 points to help Standards to its upset victory. Eaton led the losers with 7.

Filipino Athletes Meet Saturday

Filipino athletes of the District and nearby cities will meet here on Saturday at 8:30 p. m. in the Continental Hotel to complete the Filipinos sports organization.

Plans for local matches in softball, volleyball, tennis, golf, bowling, table tennis and other sports will be discussed.

Arrangements for the annual inter-city contests to be held here will also be completed, with Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Norfolk and Portsmouth, among those sending representatives.

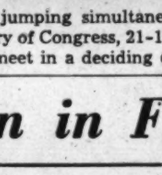
Down in Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, April 12.—The embarrassing predicament in which I was thrown by Mrs. Babe Ruth when she accidentally identified me as Bill Dickey to the delight of 50 or 60 howling young autograph hunters, recalls several similar situations which have brought about more or less embarrassment to names in the news.



VIDMER

Several years ago it was George M. Cohan's custom to have his dinner in the Astor grill and hardly a night went by that he couldn't be found seated at his favorite table in solitary grandeur.

One night a stranger entered and was ushered to an adjoining table and although he didn't have the appearance of a person who could produce the price of cakes and coffee he ordered a large and elaborate meal. While he was being served he fell into conversation with Mr. Cohan and in the course of time he asked the song and dance man if he dined there often. "Almost every night," Cohan replied.

"Is that so?" asked the stranger. "Then you must have seen my friend George M. Cohan here. He eats here regularly too."

Cohan smiled. "Is George M. Cohan a friend of yours?" he asked.

"Oh, yes. Yes, indeed," the stranger replied expansively. "I've known Georgie a long, long time."

"Well, I'll just bet you that you wouldn't know Cohan if you saw him," Cohan said.

"You've got a bet," said the stranger. "I'll bet you the dinners."

"Right," said Cohan. "How are we going to settle it?"

"Why, you're George M. Cohan," the stranger replied to the surprise and embarrassment of the famous actor.

The Wrong Man

And then there was the mistake made by Max Schmeling when he was crossing the ocean for his second fight with Joe Louis. Max, as you may have heard, is a confirmed film fan and the first day out on the boat he was interested to notice that one of his fellow passengers was Boris Karloff, the ugly man of pictures.

Max nodded and smiled as they passed on the deck and was rewarded with a nod from his fellow passeng The next day they exchanged brief nods of recognition again. The third day Max found his ship acquaintance standing alone at the rail and wishing to discuss the motion picture business approached and said:

"Good morning, Mr. Karloff."

Naturally Max was confused, flustered and no little embarrassed when the other passenger turned and drawing himself up to his full height frowned.

"I am not Boris Karloff," he said in unmistakable indignation. "My name is Schmidt." Whereupon he turned and stalked away.

Then there was the deflation of my friend Billy Debeck, the cartoonist who has had his funny paper people carousing around the hill-billy country for several years. Naturally Billy figured that his little people must be pretty popular among the hills where most of his scenes have been set recently, and passing through that country he paused for a meal in a restaurant.

"I Can Wash It Off"

The menu he was handed was covered with isinglass and, wishing to show his appreciation and perhaps give the proprietor a thrill, he called for a pen. When he finished his meal he drew a most elaborate picture of Barney Google and Snuffy Smith on the isinglass, finishing off with a flourishing autograph.

The proprietor approached just as he finished and gazed down at the picture on his menu without changing his expression or the slightest gleam of pleasure in his eye.

"Gee, I hope I haven't spoiled your menu for you," Billy said in mock apologetic tones.

"Naw," replied the proprietor magnanimously. "I can wash that stuff right off."

Sometimes, as in the instances mentioned above, celebrities are embarrassed because they are not recognized where they expect to be. But probably more often it's the other way round.

Just the other evening Stanley Walker was standing at the bar in Jack Bleeck's when a stranger entered and stood beside him. After a couple of drinks the stranger wanted to cash a check, and Ray, the bartender, apologetically said that he didn't know him, and asked if anyone could identify him.

"Why, I know everybody who comes in here," he said in a grand manner. "My pal, Stanley Walker, for instance."

Curly Lambeau's Father, 62, Dies Suddenly

Kuhel Homers As Chisox Win

Paragould, Ark., April 12 (AP).—Home runs by Rosenthal, Sylvestri and Kuhel helped the Chicago White Sox win a 6-to-2 victory today over Pittsburgh.

Jim Tobin, the second Pirate hurler to work a full nine innings, saved his mates from a whitewashing by knocking a home run with Catcher Ray Beeres on base in the eighth inning. The hit was one of four doled out by Clint Brown and Johnny Rigney, Sox moundsmen.

Browns Rout Chicago Cubs, 12-7

Kansas City, April 12 (AP).—Three walks and some weird defensive play by the Chicago Cubs' infield gave the St. Louis Browns a 6-run lead in the second inning of their exhibition game here today, and then the St. Louisans romped on to a 12-to-7 victory.

A's Triumph In 10 Innings

Tarboro, N. C., April 12 (AP).—The Athletics won a 14-13 victory over Williamsport, Pa., of the Eastern League today, although two Philadelphia players hit enough home runs to win any man's ball game in shorter order than this 10-inning affair.

Business Meetings

The credit managers in the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association will hold a luncheon in the grill room of the Hay-Adams House on Friday. Pontiac Motors will hold a meeting at the same hotel on Friday.

General Foods Sets Record In 1st Quarter

New York, Apri 12 (AP).—Colby M. Chester, chairman of General Foods Corporation, told stockholders at the annual meeting today that case sales in the first three months of the year were the largest for any quarter in its history.

"The report for the three months ending March 31," Chester stated, "will show sales of $36,544,019 and profits of $4,082,316 after all charges, compared with sales of $34,265,088 and profits of $3,375,727 for the same period in 1938."

Westinghouse

Pittsburgh, April 12 (AP).—George H. Bucher, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., reported today at the company's annual meeting that orders for electrical equipment were almost 32 per cent ahead of last year. Board Chairman A. W. Robertson said the company expected the improvement to continue throughout the year.

Incoming orders for the quarter ending March 31 were $50,120,832 as compared with $37,998,569 for the same period last year. Orders in January amounted to $16,751,895; in February, $16,677,141, and in March, $16,768,516.

Libbey-Owens-Ford

Toledo, Ohio, April 12 (AP).—Libbey-Owens-Ford reported net profit of $1,722,780.41, equivalent to 89 cents a share for the first quarter of 1939 at the annual meeting of stockholders today. This compares with a net loss of $371,527.49 in the first quarter of 1938.

Grain Traders Keep Watchful Eyes on Europe

Chicago, April 12 (AP).—Uneasiness because of war fears gave way to an attitude of watchful waiting in the grain market today and prices fluctuated nervously but narrowly as trading volume contracted.

Alternately lifting ¼ cent above yesterday's close then dipping that much below, wheat quotations were little changed throughout the session, which was comparatively quiet in contrast to recent rather busy days.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ¼ higher compared with yesterday, May, 68¾@68⅝; July, 68@68⅛. Corn, ⅛-¼ higher, May, 47⅜; July, 49⅜@49½. Oats, ⅛-⅜ higher. Rye unchanged to ¼ lower. Lard unchanged to 3 down.

The Market

Rise Continues With Calmer Europe Profit-Taking Sales Well Absorbed Bonds Firm but Market Is Dull

New York, April 12.—The stock market spent its entire session today well above the range of Tuesday, leaving a sizable gap on the chart between the best average of that day and the worst prices of today. The incentive for such a jump was the better tone of news in Europe where, although every country of importance is massing its military strength, there appears to be more of a willingness to talk things over rather than to start firing.

The situation is as fraught with danger as ever, but news from abroad indicates that for the moment there will be no war between the major powers. While Wall Street opinion naturally is as divided as that in any other district as to what will be the next moves of the major powers, the growing belief among leaders in the street is that the stiffening opposition of the democracies to the aggressions of the totalitarian states has now reached the point where these countries will be stopped, with the possible exception of German acquisition of Danzig and the Polish corridor.

No one speaks with too much conviction in such discussions but at least the situation did not become any more tense today and this helped the rallying tendency which the market developed on the preceding day. The action of the list was regarded as favorable by technical students and it was felt it could go further before profit taking by the in-and-out traders would force another reaction. Operations of this group were in evidence toward the close today but their realizing sales were well absorbed and the close was not far from the day's best.

Coppers Up Despite Cut

The composite average showed a net advance of 0.59 point, with good support for the steels, utilities, rails and coppers, the last-named group rising despite another price cut. There were 20 new lows established despite the rising trend. Loft again stood out as the most active stock of the day and it reached 10⅝, a new high for the move since the favorable court decision on its Pepsi-Cola litigation, but it sold off slightly for the session.

Midweek trade news promised no early upswing in domestic trade, but the street regarded as a favorable straw in the wind the action of Congress in showing its independence and turning down the President's request for an additional $50,000,000 in relief funds. While this is a small item in dollars, compared with the Administration's spending habits, it was regarded as bullish in that it reflected a swing toward sanity in expenditures and indicated that Congress will no longer enact requested expenditures merely at the request of the executive branch of the Government.

Electric power production dropped 1.1 per cent below the previous week, but is still 9.2 per cent above the like week of a year ago. In the oil industry the statistical position has been improved by a drop in gasoline supplies. March figures on the aggregate value of building permits, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, showed a sharp expansion over February.

Gains of 1 to 2 points were made by American Can, Atchison, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, General Motors, Johns Manville, Kennicott, Standard of New Jersey and Westinghouse. Harvester jumped 4 and du Pont 3¼.

Bonds Higher, Market Thin

The tone of the listed bond market turned cheerful today after its long spell of nervous unsettlement, but the trading volume remained small. Turnover was only $6,470,000. The market remains extremely thin and the modest buying occasioned advances from fractions to 3 points. Only the inactive issues that had not been traded in some days were marked downward. Foreign dollar bonds joined the upward trend, which indicates again the overwhelming influence of external affairs on our market.

All descriptions of foreign issues joined the movement. Italian and German bonds moved up 1 to 2 points, and issues of eastern European countries were marked higher. Danish and Belgian obligations regained parts of their previous losses. The British Empire issues of Australia and Canada gained fractions. Among Latin-American dollar bonds advances were the rule, but Chileans proved an exception owing to the steps there for complete default.

Local Trade Up 3 Per Cent During March

Business Here is Now Normal, While a Year Ago It Was 10% Under

New York, April 12.—Washington was one of 30 trading centers showing substantial business improvement in March, 3 per cent or more, over February, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit, advertising firm.

Business in Washington as of April 1 stood at normal, respresenting a gain of 3 per cent over the standing of March 1. On April 1, 1938 the city's business index stood at 10 per cent below normal.

Business showed substantial improvement in 63 major areas during March, according to the survey. This compares with gains in only 41 areas during the preceding month. In addition to the areas showing gains in March, 15 others remained at their February levels. Declines occurred in 69 areas where business continued to feel the pressure of economic disturbances. National business continued operating during March at 21 per cent below normal—the same level as maintained during February.

The greatest March gains were registered in the following areas: Bakersfield, Camden, Canton, Charleston, W. Va., Chattanooga, Cincinnati, Duluth, Erie, Fresno, Green Bay, Huntington, Jackson, Mich., Kalamazoo, Knoxville, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Norfolk, Oakland, Peoria, Phoenix, Providence, Reading, Reno, Seattle, Sioux City, Spokane, Terre Haute, Tulsa, Washington, D. C., and Wilmington, Del.

The following areas were closest to normal in March: Albuquerque, Atlanta, Austin, Billings, Boise, Cheyenne, Dallas, Grand Junction, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Knoxville, Miami, Phoenix, Reno, Richmond, Shreveport, Terre Haute, Washington, D. C., and Winston-Salem.

Copper Cut ¼ Cent To 10½c a Pound

New York, April 12 (AP).—A leading smelter today lowered the price of domestic copper ¼-cent a pound to 10½ cents. The reduction followed one of ½-cent a pound last week by American Smelting & Refining Co., which action was concurred in by major producers on Monday when a general level of 10¾ cents was established for the entire industry.

The new quotation places copper back at the level prevailing last October 5 from which point it was marked up gradually to a high of 11¾ cents on October 14 and maintained at that price until the cut last week. Foreign copper has been below the domestic price for some time, sales today being at the equivalent of 10.13 to 10.19 cents a pound.

Power Production At Year's Low

New York, April 12 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States during the week ended April 8 dropped to 2,173,510,000 kilowatt hours, the lowest since the week of January 7, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. Latest production was 1.6 per cent less than 2,209,971,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week, but 9.2 per cent more than 1,990,447,000 in the preceding week.

The decline, which was against seasonal expectations, carried the Associated Press index of power production to a new 1939 low at 112.5. In the previous week the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend and based on 1929-30 as 100, stood at 115.4 and a year ago at 105.5.

Cotton Yields To Bombay Sales

New York, April 12 (AP).—Bombay selling dominated the cotton futures market again today. Final losses of 6 to 11 points were registered as heavy Indian liquidation—estimated close to 25,000 bales—met only limited support.

As in previous sessions, Bombay offerings centered on the July delivery. Liverpool was also a vigorous seller, believed due largely to the proposed Government barter plan and a renewal of rumors the export subsidy woud be revived.

Wilbur C. Cook Heads Ward Baking Co.

New York, April 12.—At a meeting of the Ward Baking Co. held yesterday, Wilbur C. Cook was elected president and a member of the board. All the other officers of the corporation were re-elected.

Mr. Cook has resigned as vice president of E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc., investment bankers, which office he has held for the last three years. He has had a long experience in the merchandising and advertising fields, and was one of the owners of George L. Dyer & Co., advertising and merchandising counsel.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, April 12 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—The wool market in Boston was very dull today. Buyers were keeping in touch with the market, but they were not showing an inclination to bid for large quantities of wool. Nominal quotations of spot wools were showing little change because of the lack of effort being made to buy or to sell.

Business Index Rises in Week

New York, April 12 (AP).—Time Magazine's index of business conditions rose 0.4 of a point last week to 95.2, compared with 94.8 the previous week and 90.2 a year ago.

The index, which is designed to reflect changes in underlying conditions which are likely to influence the volume of business, was buoyed by an increase in spending activity in trade centers and a sharp rise in bank deposits.

Alvan Macauley Chairman, Gilman Packard President

Detroit, April 12.—Alvan Macauley, president of Packard Motor Car Co. since 1916, announced today that at his own request he will become chairman of the board. At the same time he announced that M. M. Gilman, vice president and general manager, had been nominated as his successor in the presidency.

Mr. Macauley said he is freeing himself from the responsibilities of the operating management to concentrate on a long-range expansion program for Packard, which, under his leadership, has shown an increase in net worth from $17,000,000 in 1916 to $42,000,000 in 1939.

The company produced 109,518 cars in 1937, a record year. This compares with a total output of 15,737 units 23 years ago, when Mr. Macauley became president.

"Recent years of the company's growth," said Mr. Macauley, "have been marked by Packard's entry into the lower priced volume field, the success of which has been due in substantial degree to the contributions of Mr. Gilman. His election to the board of directors will be voted on at the annual meeting April 17. The board then will act on his elevation to the presidency.

Glenn L. Martin Orders Total $39,137,738

Baltimore, April 12 (AP).—Glenn L. Martin Co. reported today its net sales for the first quarter of 1939 were $3,540,511, compared to $4,360,711 for the same period last year. Net profit for the period this year was $682,496, compared to $828,563 for the first quarter of 1938. The quarter's income this year was equal to 62½ cents on each of the 1,092,308 common shares outstanding.

$365,436,437 Gold Flows to U. S. in March

By the Associated Press.

Gold shipments into the United States in March totaled $365,436,437, the largest since the first Czecho-Slovakian crisis last fall, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

The Federal Reserve Board said that a large part of these shipments were made by foreign governments and their central banks, rather than by individuals who were responsible for the huge shipments of last fall, which reached a record of $562,381,561 last October.

March imports included $37,178,725 from Belgium, $27,097,980 from the Netherlands, $8,226,832 from Switzerland, $250,065,107 from England $6,860,916 from Canada, $3,842,169 from Mexico, $1,456,007 from Chile, $4,234,320 from Colombia, $3,685,212 from India, $1,295,209 from Hongkong, $11,409,596 from Japan, $3,325,912 from the Philippine Islands, and $4,302,626 from Australia.

The month's silver imports totaled $7,206,579, including $1,336,007 from England, $884,049 from Canada, $3,127,717 from Mexico and $759379 from Peru.

War Rumors Hurt Steel, Girdler Says

Jersey City, N. J., April 12 (AP).—T. M. Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, told stockholders today the company had made a little money, but "not very much," in the first three months of this year. He said that if war rumors would stop, "I think we would have a pretty good business in 1939."

"If we do have war," Girdler continued, "the steel business may be better or worse. I don't know. I know that Republic Steel Corporation does not want to make any money out of war, but if it should come we will do our best in our way for the Government and the stockholders."

Ft. Washington, D. C. Outpost, To Be Vacated

'District Defenders' to Be Moved to Va. Side Of Memorial Bridge

Historic Fort Washington, which for more than a century guarded the sea approach to the Nation's Capital, will be abandoned by the Army and its garrison quartered at a new post to be established in Virginia just across the Lincoln Memorial Bridge.

The Third Battalion, Twelfth infantry, which with a squadron of cavalry and a battalion of artillery at Fort Myer make up the Washington Brigade, will be moved to its new home near the heart of the city within a few weeks, just as soon as temporary barracks can be erected. Then, the "District's defenders" will be within a few minutes call for parades, escorts, riot duty or defense.

A part of the normal Washington garrison for years, the battalion has been housed at the old artillery post 14 miles down the river because of lack of accommodations at Fort Myer. Now, the War Department has acquired a part of the Department of Agriculture's experimental farm between Arlington Cemetery and the river and the defenders will be quartered in temporary buildings similar to the CCC structures, which were on the plot until a few months ago.

Building Contract Let

Later, the War Department expects to obtain funds for permanent buildings and ultimately hopes that it can take over the whole experimental farm tract for a fully equipped Army post.

A $50,000 contract for the construction of 55 buildings was let yesterday by the Office of the Quartermaster General, officials said.

These include barracks for four companies, an administration building, recreation hall, mess hall and garages. While accommodations will be constructed for the 464 enlisted men of the battalion, Lieut. Col. William F. Lee, its commander, and other officers will rent quarters in Washington.

Despite the temporary nature of the buildings, officials said that walks and lawns, a parade ground and a generally attractive appearance will be presented.

Will Become Park

Fort Washington, as has long been planned, will be taken over by the Department of Interior as a national park. The stone ramparts of the old fort, constructed more than a century ago, which rise more than 90 feet above the water's edge, will be retained and partially restored to their original state.

In colonial days the high bluff between Piscataway and Swan Creek was the site of an Indian stockade. After th eRevolutionary War, when the young republic was considering designs for the newly planned Capitol, George Washington himself selected the tract because of its commanding position.

During the War of 1812, however, the post was blown up in the face of approaching British forces. Rebuilt, it remained an active post until after the Civil War. During the Spanish-American War, modern guns and equipment were installed and the post again began to be important in the defense of Washington.

With the increase in the size of warships, however, the Potomac's narrowness of channel became the real barrier against a naval attack on Washington and its guns were torn out and sent to France in 1917. Since the World War, the fort has had no artillery, its buildings being used to quarter Infantry troops.

Clifford S. Manning, Ex-Navy Baker, Dies

Clifford Shirley Manning, baker in the U. S. Navy, on duty at the Navy Yard here until illness forced him to retire several months ago, died yesterday at Naval Hospital. He leaves a wife in Philadelphia. Funeral services and burial will be in the Westminster Cemetery at Philadelphia.

Economic Co-operation Urged To Forge Pan-America Pacts

A program of economic co-operation to implement the declarations of Lima, Buenos Aires and Montevideo was urged yesterday by William S. Culbertson, former Ambassador to Chile, before the Washington Rotary Club.

"The spirit of the Americas will vanish into air like 'the baseless fabric' of a dream unless it is translated into a constructive and reciprocal program of economic co-operation," he said at a Pan-American luncheon, to which envoys of all Latin-American countries had been invited.

Praising the idealistic spirit of the Lima Pan-American Conference as a "symbol of high purpose and firm resolve that peace and justice still remain the dominant forces in the action of mankind," he pointed out that without the trade and capital by which a high standard of living is created "the things of the spirit make little progress." He urged greater emphasis on our economic relations with Latin America rather than our cultural relations.

Pointing out that disagreements exist apart from the Lima declaration of solidarity in defense of American principles, he urged that "questions which from conference to conference have been avoided" be settled "either by definite agreement or by definite disagreement, if it must be."

"The American republics claim no monopoly of the ideals which form the basis of their co-operation, ideals which . . . rest on the concept of union, not of empire," he declared. "Their ideals will grow stronger if shared by the rest of the world."

Dietitians Smack Their Lips Over Vitamin Food at Lorton

Average Prisoner Gains Upwards of 10 Pounds, They Learn; Vegetables, Milk Produced on Grounds; Meals Cost 18c Daily

Workhouse and Lorton inmates gain from 10 to 20 pounds and eat better food than the average Washingtonian it was declared yesterday by a group of expert dietitians partaking of a prison-cooked luncheon.

The cost a day per inmate of this vitamin-packed food is 18 cents it was stated.

Calvin E. Wade, assistant stewart, and host of the luncheon at the Workhouse, explained that the food, most of which is grown on the reservation, contained the proper proteins, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins.

"I dare say the average prisoner at the Workhouse or Lorton receives better food than the average person in the city," Wade said.

Until recently the prisoners were fed for 21 cents per day, but an increasing population and a stationary appropriation for food necessitated a reduction in the food cost.

However, all visitors agreed the meal, which was an example of the prison diet, was good. It contained spring onions (grown on their own farm), Virginia ham (pigs raised on the farm and cured there), parsnips (also grown on the farm), kale (grown on the farm), spaghetti (in cans), potatoes (farm product), milk (from the prison cows) and ice cream, made from the milk from the cows.

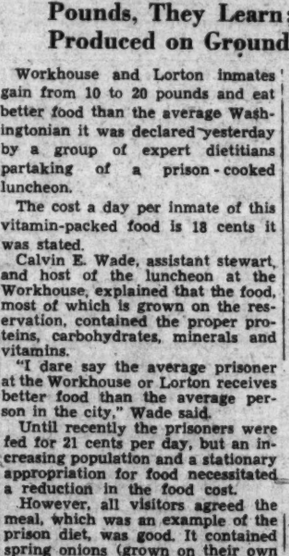
Everyone had to pay for his meal, too. Elwood Street, director of Public Welfare, present at the luncheon, said the policy of paying for meals by "outsiders" was instituted by Supt. Ray Huff.

Prior to Huff's supertendency, outsider's meals cost the District about $3,000 a year. Visitors seemed to come to the prison "just about lunch time," Street said. Last year, however, the prison took in about $150 for meals.

Mrs. E. O. Grant, nutritionist of the health department, said the prison diet lacked vitamin C, found largely in raw vegetables. She said, however, the diet was excellent. Meanwhile, the institution dietitians said they would provide the missing C in future meals.

Present at the luncheon were Mrs. Grant, Street, M. H. Gardner, Ninth street wharf; Miss Evelyn Hibbard, Washington Home for Foundlings; Miss Genevieve Jenks, Washington Home for Foundlings; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Little, Home for Aged and Infirm; Albert Bell, Home for Aged and Infirm; Mrs. J. Rowan, Florence Crittenton Home; H. H. Knock, Municipal Lodging House; Mrs. Grady H. Leonard and Miss Lydia Woolen, of the Receiving Home, and W. M. Carpenter, Industrial Home School for Colored Children.

'The American Mother of 1939'



Mrs. Otelia Compton, of Wooster, Ohio, the widowed mother of four famous children, was unanimously elected "The American Mother of 1939" by the Golden Rule Foundation in New York. She is the mother of Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of M. I. T.; Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago and Nobel Prize winner; Wilson M. Compton, manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. C. Herbert Rice, prominent Presbyterian missionary.

Funeral Services Tomorrow for Mrs. Mary Downey

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary I. Downey, 90, a resident of this city for 50 years, will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Sacred Heart Church, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Mrs. Downey died yesterday at her home, 1450 Irving street northwest, after a brief illness.

A native of Naperville, Ill., she was living in Chicago at the time of the great fire with her husband, the late B. J. Downey. She once recalled being separated from her husband for three days while he was fighting the fire.

Mrs. Downey was a member of the Ladies' Sodality of Sacred Heart Church. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Fred J. Rice, and a son, Richard J. Downey, of this city; another son, William O. Downey, of Richmond, Va., and nine grandchildren.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Bruno Walter conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in its sixty-fourth midweek concert Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Overture to "Oberon" (Weber), Symphony in G minor, K 550 (Mozart), "Tod und Verklaerung" (Richard Strauss), Prelude to "Lohengrin," "Siegfried Idyll" and Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner).

Bruno Walter's first appearance in Washington as guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra last evening will long remain in the memories of the enthusiastic auditors who accorded him an ovation extended to three recalls after the first half of the program and four at the close of the concert. That Constitution Hall was not filled to capacity is regrettable principally because each vacant place represented an absent music lover who missed an enkindling experience. The aesthetic excitement was not aroused by any novelties, for the most recent work on the program was aged by half a century, but by the personality of a splendid musician.

Faced with the opportunity to prove its mettle under the baton of one of the greatest living conductors, the orchestra rose to the occasion with an admirable proficiency which fully justified the community's pride in the organization and must have filled the heart of Dr. Hans Kindler with exaltation. The players, one and all, were keenly aware of the test they were undergoing, as was manifest in the alertness of their response to direction and in the unflagging spirit of their performance. They had never before worked so strenuously and with such zest, and their reward was the accolade of Bruno Walter's approval.

Mr. Walter's superb musicianship authoritative in the highest degree and sensitive to the smallest detail of phrasing and color, was immediately evident in the romantic overture to "Oberon," which became in his handling a virtual tone-poem. But this was merely the preparation for his supremely eloquent reading of Mozart's G minor symphony, a reading characterized by profound understanding of the spiritual values of the music, by finesse in the disclosure of its structural graces and by subtlety in interpretation of its intellectual content.

Because the G minor symphony is one of the most familiar items in the orchestral repertoire, the jaded critic does not expect to be surprised by its novelty. Yet Mr. Walter's reading was not only the most exciting one I have ever heard, but also the most fresh in its spirit. The music was not so much refurbished as created anew for one's delighted ears. It sounded as bright and untarnished as though it had been written last week.

A parallel freshening of old material went on during the second half of the program. The Richard Strauss symphonic poem, "Tod und Verklaerung," was vividly projected both in its grisly description of the death-bed agonies of body and mind and in the serenity of the peace beyond the grave. The prelude to "Lohengrin" was perfomed with a full unfolding of its beauties, the "Siegfied Idyll" was treated in a truly poetic manner, and the corspiel to "Die Meistersinger" brought the concert to a brilliant close.

IN MEMORIAM

GERTRUDE M. McNALLY

BATTI, GINO A. In sad and loving memory of our dear husband and father, who passed away two years ago today, April 13, 1937.
Gone is the face we love so dear.
Silent is the voice we love to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember our Gino, dear,
And soft absence is just as near.
Lovingly, LINA AND CHILDREN.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A new playing convention involving the use of the high-low echo has been developed by A. Cyril Daldy, of St. Louis, and is being studied by the Four Aces with a view toward incorporating it in their play. Its object is to aid defensive play assisting in its scientific development.

Daldy's echo corresponds to the lead-directing double in bidding, which asks the leader to open an abnormal suit. The echo—which is the discard of first a high and then a low card in the declarer's suit—asks partner when he obtains the lead to return an abnormal suit—not the one originally led or the one possibly bid, but some other one. This may be the only means the signaler may have of indicating to his partner the play that will set the contract.

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 NT.	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ♠

In the play, West leads his fourth best spade, the five. East puts up the nine and declarer wins with the jack.

West realizes that declarer also has the king and ace of spades and it will take two more leads to clear the suit, but possibly if his partner has a heart honor, a shift to that suit will defeat the contract. But how to tell this to partner? How to prevent him from returning a spade?

Declarer, in the meantime, attacks the diamonds. He leads the queen, and West sees an opportunity to get across his message to partner. He plays the diamond nine, small is put on from dummy and East drops the five. He puzzles about that nine, and waits for the next lead. Declarer follows with the diamond eight. West plays the four dummy the ten and East takes with the king. East knows that West is trying to tell him something, but what? There is no particular reason to be concerned about the diamonds. Clubs, from the nature of his own hand and dummy's seem unlikely. Spades were opened and spades ordinarily would be returned, so it must be hearts that West is signaling for, East plays a heart and the hand is defeated.

South's jack is killed and three heart tricks are inevitable, as West must get in with the ace of clubs. Three hearts, a club and a diamond make the five tricks to set the bid.

Say the Aces:

"We rather like this echo and are studying it carefully with the idea of possibly adopting it for our own play."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

All Government Departments are in a state of restrained jitters and executives are sitting on the edges of their chairs expecting any day to find themselves no longer bosses but on their way to some obscure station "in the field."

The fear and trembling has been brought about by the President's signing the Government reorganization bill which permits a good bit of willy-nilly swapping around of agencies which have been reposing for years in the same old building. Nobody knows where Mr. Roosevelt will decide certain services will be able to do better work.

The situation is particularly distressing to all the people who have just gotten over the grippe and would like to take a couple of weeks off to go to Florida on "sick leave." They don't dare go out of town, because when they came back they might be without an office or worse, still they might have achieved a "temporary furlough," meaning a state between life and death in which they get their job back if the position is ever needed which is doubtful. Meantime, they don't get paid and the orderly process of life falls apart so much that civil servants who have worked here for for maybe 25 years have to begin to figure on wearing their celluloid collars two days in a row.

Life may begin for the haute monde at 8:40 but for civil servants it starts twice a month on the first and the fifteenth when the pay checks come out.

Did you know that "the season for harvesting grapefruit under the Mexican fruit fly quarantine regulations, which apply to the Texas counties of Brooks, Cameron, Hidalgo and Willacy and part of Jim Wells County, has been extended to the close of May 15?"

We didn't know it, either, and weren't aware of our lack of knowledge until we received one of the Agriculture Department's bits which are mailed broadcast to all and sundry.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a recent appearance before the Senate Appropriations Committee, made a few general remarks "about the agricultural situation in relation to peace."

"War and the imminent fear of war mean greatly increased costs to the nations not immediately concerned who are interested above all in peace," he declared.

"Such cost will be small, of course, in comparison with the costs of war itself. But the costs of peace in a world at war can be much greater in the case of agriculture than is customarily expected."

Orchids were tossed last week to the non-enrolled personnel of the Civilian Conservation Corps by Director Robert Fechner.

The work of non-enrolled members, he declared, "is less well known, although their share in making a success of the corps is of the greatest importance and their influence on the boys themselves is of inestimable value . . . These are the men who have supervision of the boys while they are in camp, and while they are at work on the conservation projects. These are the men who by their interest, their example, their guidance, and their inspiration have done much to make a success of the individual enrollee's stay in the corps and to help him find his place in private life after he leaves camp, a healthier, better educated boy and a better citizen."

Bob Burns Says—

You know it's remarkable the efficient way things are run nowadays to protect a fella. You take a letter I got the other day. It was from an organization called "The Better Business Bureau," and it said in the letter that if I ever got swindled in a business deal I should report it to them right away, and they would take care of everythin' for me. And I wanta tell you that's mighty convenient. In the olds days if you bought somethin' and then found out later it didn't come up to what the salesman told you it would—well, you were just stuck.

Last time I was down home I ran into a terrible argument right out in the middle of Main street. I went out to see what the trouble was and found two fellas just goin' to it hammer and tongs. I asked a bystander what the trouble was and he said, "Why those two boys have swapped mules, and now each one is accusin' the other of skinnin' him."

And I says, "Well, then why don't they trade back?"

And the man said, "I reckon they're both afraid of gettin' skinned again."

Elizabeth's Youth Diversified By Travel, Friends and Books

Queen Liked to Play At Dressing Up On Rainy Days

CHAPTER IV

Of childish vanity I can find no record. The one and only occasion when she does appear to have been rather puffed up with pride was when she was stung by a bee, and, flushed with elation, rushed about proclaiming the fact: "Clever me! Me's got a sting in my chin—a whole sting in my chin! Would any one like to take it out?"

Alas! no one will tell me of any huffy rages, sulks, tantrums, rumps or doldrums, so I suppose I must accept the fact that none there were.

Was Polite Child

Her exceptional social instinct may be said to have showed itself in babyhood. She lisped civilities, and long before she could speak plainly, knew how to put others at their ease.

Signs of the housewifely instinct were shown precociously early. A frequent and welcome visitor in the still-room, she said one day: "If you could make the pats of butter smaller, it would be much more better. Persons leave some of the big pats on their plates and that is very very waste."

In spite of diligent research I can discover only one occasion on which she slightly embarrassed her parents. Lady Nina Balfour, a great friend of the family, had just come into the room.

The Earl and Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne, parents of Queen Elizabeth. Countess Strathmore died more than a year ago.

"We haven't had no presents lately, Elizabeth," David Lyon complained to his sister.

"No," said she cheerfully, "but perhaps we shall have some big ones now Nina has come."

Though, as has already been said, during Queen Elizabeth's early childhood the year was chiefly divided between her father's Scottish and English homes, several weeks of each year used to be spent in London, where Lord Strathmore owned a beautiful Adams house in St. James place.

London Life was Fun

Gratified greed cannot always compensate for social discomfort, and many children find themselves quite unable to enjoy children's parties. But as Queen Elizabeth was too unself-conscious to be shy, she greatly enjoyed all the parties that her presence (so her hostesses tell me) appreciably enlivened.

It was at one of these children's parties—one given by Lady Leicester—that at the age of 5 she made a notable conquest. This was the occasion on which our present King first saw his future wife and, in spite of all the distractions of crackers and ice-sugar cakes, the little girl in rose-pink satin made so deep an impression on the boy Prince that at their first grown-up meeting, about 13 years later, he immediately recognized her.

On the occasions of these parties she was, it appears, always surrounded by a bevy of adoring children.

Travel Abroad

Besides the occasional weeks spent in London the routine of the future Queen's life was several times joyfully interrupted by visits to Italy where she went to stay at the Villa Capponi with Lady Strathmore's beautiful mother, Mrs. Scott.

The Queen vividly remembers the thrill of night travel and restaurant-car meals, and at the end of the journey the glamor of being "abroad," the amusing gabble and gesticulation of foreigners, and all the color and beauty of this Italian home.

Good as it was to go abroad, it was equally delightful to return to her English or her Scottish home, in neither of which was life ever dull. For though "the Benjamins"—as Lady Elizabeth and her youngest brother, David, were called—of the Bowes-Lyon family were so inseparable, they were by no means left to themselves, for they were amply provided with attentive elder brothers and sisters, in all of whose interest the Queen Elizabeth was deeply absorbed.

Popular As Aunt

Early provided with a bevy of nephews and nieces, Queen Elizabeth always showed great aptitude for aunthood. As instructress in the art of making daisy chains, organizer of hide-and-seek, dressing-up and picnics, "Aunt Elizabuff" reigned supreme. Also as proprietor of pets, for besides birds she kept rabbits, frogs, chickens, goats, tortoises and pigs. Aunts who keep pigs are none too common, and the nephews and nieces were properly grateful.

Never in her own early childhood had Queen Elizabeth ever been at a loss for occupation. That bored cry of: "What can we do now?" never distressed the ears of her attendants. Able to make her own fun, she required no jaded slaves of the lamp to entertain her.

When she was quite small she liked playing with dolls, but they needed to have eyes that would open and shut, and real hair that could stand rather ostentatious brushing.

As soon as ever she could read she gobbled books, and her nurse tells me she remembers elbows perpetually rough and red from excessive reading on the floor.

Liked Exercise

Though now an ardent and good tennis player, Queen Elizabeth was as a child more addicted to climbing trees and running races than to orthodox games, and golf held no charms for her. Riding she loved, and at a very early age was allowed to trot about on Bobs by herself. In her scarlet rding-habit, proudly waving to all she met, she was a familiar figure on this minute Shetland pony, who was so tame that when her little mistress dismounted from his back as often as not he would follow her indoors and sometimes even upstairs.

On wet days the family dressing-up chest was an unfailing resource. Not only was it full of costumes of the periods between James I and George IV, but it also held a wonderful varity of wigs.

But probably in all weathers and at all times the little Lady Elizabeth's favorite occupation was making friends. At this pastime she was so successful that visitors, pretending to be superstitious, used by deliberate miscounting to make Lady Stratmore believe her party to be 13 in number so that her youngest daughter should come down to luncheon to make 14. "How many will there be in the dining room?" the butler asked one day. "Fourteen if you count I," answered Lady Elizabeth.

Learning Faces 'Gravest Crisis,' Educators Told

'Poisons of 25 Years Ago Are Brewing,' Catholic Holds

Education fears its gravest crisis in history, leading Catholic educators told 3,000 delegates to the annual National Catholic Educational Association convention, which opened yesterday at Catholic University.

"The educator again sees the same poisons that paralyzed the schools 25 years ago brewing," said the Rev. Francis L. Meade, C. M., vice president of Niagara University, at the opening session in the university gymnasium. "Personalities have changed—but the dynamics are the same—only they are stronger, more bitter and more dangerous.

"When cannons roar and shells screech, culture, discipline and knowledge cease," the Niagara University head said.

"Gravely Imperiled"

"Few can doubt," the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, said in his sermon at the Immaculate Conception "that we are approaching one of those crises where the rights and liberties of the people as human beings are gravely imperiled."

The Right Rev. John R. Hagan, diocesan superintendent of schools in Cleveland, found a note of optimism in the "universal expressions of sorrow evoked by the death of Pius XI," and in the election of Pius XII, which the world hailed as a "continuation of the strong advocacy of justice and peace."

Factors stifling the processes of enlightenment—Catholic and non-Catholic—Dr. Meade believes, are headed by the struggle between autocracy and democracy. He also listed nationalism and colonial expansion.

Wounds Never Healed

These factors, strong enough to precipitate the last World War, are doubly powerful today, the educator said, pointing to the fates of China and Manchukuo, Ethiopia, Sudetenland, Czecho-Slovakia and, "in the distance," he continued, "a strident, insistent voice keeps whispering 'Tunisia,' 'Djibuti,' 'Hungary,' 'Albania.'"

In the face of this dire outlook the so-called "modern" educator has no answer, Dr. Meade said. "To him society is a whirlpool, whipped to frenzy by winds and tides that come from nowhere.

"One thing, though, we do know, and we know it is not changing—human nature, empowered for truth and endowed for good. Before that picture Catholic education stands in challenge."

The educators met in special groups yesterday afternoon.

Discussing remedial reading before the parish school department, Dr. James A. Fitzgerald, clinical director of reading at Loyola University, Chicago, said "many of the failures in school and in life occur because of reading deficiencies."

Grading Discussed

Developing a leading program along the lines of the child's principal interest may be helpful, he said.

Systems of grading pupils were discussed by the Rev. Joseph A. Gierut, of St. Mary's College, Orchard Lake, Mich. "The Qualities in Literature that Appeal to the Catholic Boy" was the subject of a paper by the Rev. Francis E. Benz, editor of the Catholic Boy.

The department of Catholic school superintendents heard the Most Rev. John Mark Gannon, bishop of Erie, Pa., and the Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph V. S. McClancy, LL.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., at a dinner in the Raleigh Hotel, presided over by the Rev. Harold E. Keller. The topic was "The Catholic School Superintendent Past and Present." Nearly 100 superintendents from all over the country attended.

Fels Naphtha Ads Held Misleading

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it had charged Fels & Co., of Philadelphia, with using misleading statements in advertising "Fels Naphtha Soap Chips."

The commission asserted that the "product does not contain a sufficient amount of naphtha to enhance its value and increase its cleansing power, and contains neither a sufficient amount of naphtha or any other petroleum distillate to warrant its being labeled as a naphtha product."

Y 'Good Neighbor' Meeting Tonight

With a view to carrying forward the "good neighbor" policy here, the Central Young Men's Christian Association will hold a "Pan-American Night" at 8:15 o'clock tonight in the Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G street northwest.

Invitations have been extended to diplomats of the various Latin-American embassies and legations, Pan American Union officials and employes to attend. Ralph J. Hopkins is chairman of the committee.

Gittleman, Cohen Address Citizens

Raymond Gittleman, general counsel for the North Seventh Street Business Men's Association, and H. J. Cohen, chairman of the tax committee, spoke at a meeting of the association in Immaculate Conception Hall Tuesday.

Gittleman outlined the proposed changes in the District government now being studied by Congress. Cohen discussed projected revisions in the District tax structure. Benjamin Rubin was awarded a traveling bag as first prize in a competition for the best suggestions for improving the work of the association.

C. of C. Convention To Hear Hopkins

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins will be the first speaker at the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the theme of which is "expanding national income and employment." The only other speaker is George H. Davis, president of the chamber.

The four-day session, which will open on May 1, will be held here and 1,600 member organizations are expected to be represented.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Magician to Tell U. S. How To Make Warship's Invisible

It's Not Done by Mirrors, He Explains; Also Says Soldiers Appear to Be Miles From Where They Are by His Mirage

By the United Press.

New York, April 12.—Joseph Dunninger, who makes a living reading folks' minds and for fun exposes fake mediums, announced tonight that he will go to Washington some time next week to show Naval authorities how a battleship can be made invisible to the enemy.

Some Congressmen who saw a working model of the illusion invited him to give a Washington demonstration, Dunninger said, adding that for an encore he will top it off with an "optical mirage" in which the enemy can be made to see soldiers who actually are miles away from where they appear to be.

The battleship, he said, would be invisible until it approached within a half-mile of the enemy, no matter how powerful the glasses they might train on it.

Cost Is Low, He Says

Any ship could be outfitted with the device at a comparatively negligible cost, according Dunninger, of about $3,000 or $4,000 per ship.

"Absolutely no mirrors are used," he said. "The illusion is created by adaptation of a combination of principles which have been known to magicians and used by them for years. Naturally, I can't reveal what it is, but it in no way resembles the camouflage used during the World War.

Dunninger said the device would not be practical on land, although there is a method by which it might be converted to such apparatus as tanks and mobile artillery.

Dunninger's ghost soldiers, he said, employ a different principle and may be used to attract enemy fire to one position while strategic movements proceed in another section.

Exclusively for U. S.

"Enemy lookouts," he explained, "would see a group of soldiers maneuvering in one spot, but actually no soldiers would be there. The soldiers seen would really be a considerable distance away in another direction. It might be possible to fool the enemy into attacking a position where there were no soldiers, leaving the enemy's position only partly protected and easily taken."

The devices, Dunninger said, will be made available to the United States Government, if it wants them, and to no other government "at any price."
